Cease-Fire Ordered In Southern Palestine; War Spread Reported

Forces of Israel Are Attacking on Fronts Elsewhere, Observers Report

Tel Aviv, Israel, Oct. 19 (AP).—Reliable reports said fighting spread to other Arab fronts today and continued between Israel and Egypt even as the United Nations Security Council ordered an immediate cease fire.

(Truce observers informed the U. N. in Paris that Israeli forces generally were the attackers on the other fronts.)

The reports said fighting flared in the Judean foothills near the Artuv, 5 miles southeast of Latrun on the Tel Aviv-Jerusalem hwy.

U. N. officials in Haifa told of increased activity in that area and also near Jerusalem and around Nablus north of the Holy City on the central front where Trans-Jordan forces are stationed.

An Israeli army communique said two Egyptian Spitfires were shot down on the southern front. One fell into the sea in Israeli waters when it was hit by anti-aircraft guns aboard a Jewish patrol ship. The second was shot down in a dogfight over front lines in the Negev Desert where battling with Egyptians has been going on for five days.

Last night Israeli planes hit again at Egyptian targets at Gaza, El Arish airfield, Beersheba, Beit Jibrin, Majdal and Faluja. U. N.'s Haifa headquarters reported 25 bombs dropped at Gaza.

The Jews said they had officially confirmed previous reports that the civilian population had begun a flight from Gaza, the main Egyptian base in Palestine and headquarters of the Arab Palestine government.

Hunting License Fraud Costs 18 Guardsmen $1200

Huron, S. Dak., Oct. 19 (U.P.).—A pheasant-hunting trip cost 18 Reserve officers and enlisted men of the Missouri and Michigan National Guard $1200 today. They were fined for fraudulently obtaining resident hunting licenses.

Ten officers, including Col. B. G. Dilwort, Dent, Mo., a State legislator, were fined $80 each. Eighteen enlisted men were fined $50 each. All pleaded guilty.

Game Warden I. R. Riley said the men flew into Huron in an Army plane Friday, bought the licenses Saturday and started hunting. He said they claimed South Dakota residence despite a warning that they were not eligible for resident hunting licenses.

Navy Plane Pilot Badly Injured in Crash Near D. C.

A Navy fighter pilot was critically injured about 7:35 last night when his Grumman fighter plane ripped through woods and crashed in a pasture in nearby Maryland just off the 7600 block of Fort Foote rd.

He was identified as W. G. Hunter, a chief air controlman stationed at Patuxent River Naval Air Station. Hunter was taken to Casualty Hospital by the District Heights rescue squad, where the extent of his injuries was not revealed pending outcome of an operation.

According to witnesses, Hunter's plane, on a training mission from the Patuxent air base, began missing fire about 200 feet above ground. Then, with its landing gear down, it tore through the top of a large tree and came to rest in the [illegible] on its belly.

Marshall Sees Pope and State Heads in Italy

Rome, Oct. 19 (AP).—Secretary of State George C. Marshall left for Paris tonight after a crowded 24-hour visit to Italy in which he conferred with Pope Pius XII, President Luigi Einaudi, Premier Alcide de Gasperi and Foreign Minister Count Carlo Sforza.

De Gasperi told newsmen Marshall's visit had led him to believe "we can have a sense of security about peace." The Premier made his statement after he and Sforza had met to review their conversations with Marshall.

The American Secretary of State, who came here from a weekend visit to Greece, was received in a private 30-minute audience by the Pope at his summer residence at Castel Gandolfo.

Marshall shed no light on his visit.

The Communist press on the one hand said Marshall's visit to the Pope foreshadowed some sort of mediation by the Vatican in the

1 Alexandria Health Official Quits, 1 Fired

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

One Alexandria health official resigned yesterday and another was fired as the city moved to jack up its much criticized health department.

Discharged yesterday morning by City Manager Nicholas A. Colasanto was Roland M. Orrison, a sanitarian who had been employed by the city for about 15 years.

Orrison's discharge was followed in the afternoon by the resignation of Keith Wade, head of the department's sanitation division and Orrison's immediate superior.

Wade, who worked on a level directly below Health Officer W. Lewis Schafer, jr., who resigned two weeks ago, said he had planned to resign for some time.

He said his resignation was not caused by the recent survey report of the State Health Department, which severely criticized lax enforcement of sanitation ordinances and poor administration of the city's sanitation activities.

Wade had been employed by the department for seven years.

Colasanto said no pressure had been brought to bear on Wade to resign and that his resignation had been offered to Acting Health Officer Mary Carne instead of to the city manager.

Of Orrison's dismissal, Colasanto said: "We are endeavoring to improve the department and to get the best possible results from our employes." His action, he said, was prompted by the State report.

Resolution Offered By Syrian Passed Unanimously by Council of U. N.

Paris, Oct. 19 (AP).—The United Nations Security Council, by unanimous vote, today commanded Israel and Egypt to stop at once the warfare in southern Palestine.

The cease-fire—the fifth from the Council for the Holy Land—was ordered after some hesitation. Warren R. Austin of the United States, Council president, was on the point of adjourning the meeting when Syria offered the cease-firing resolution.

This asked for an immediate and effective cease-fire and instructed Dr. Ralph Bunche, the acting U. N. mediator, to negotiate for a return to the situation before last Friday's outbreak.

The Council also adopted unanimously a British-Chinese resolution asking Israel to report at an early date on progress of the investigation into the assassination of Count Folke Bernadotte, U. N. mediator. It also calls for better cooperation of Jews and Arabs with truce supervisors.

Views of Bunche Supported

The Syrian resolution contained substantially Bunche's conclusions on the situation in the Negev desert battlefront. An Israeli spokesman at the Council session challenged some of Bunche's conclusions as untrue and not giving an accurate picture of origins of the outbreak.

An authoritative source said Bunche was on the point of quitting if the Council adjourned without taking firm action. This informant said Bunche felt strongly that unless the Council backed his demands with a strong resolution the tense situation would explode into a general Holy Land war.

Syria's Faris el Khoury obviously had been waiting for some non-Arab member to offer the mediator's conclusions in the form of a resolution. He told the Council that Jews were trying to seize the Negev and accused them of "an old trick—of trying to throw responsibility to the other side."

Notified by Telegram

Bunche said Egypt and Israel were notified by telegram of the Council's demand for immediate peace. He said the U. N. truce mission now in Palestine was told to begin negotiations with Arabs and Jews to restore the southern front to its original position. The Jews claim to have cut Egyptian front lines in the fighting.

Russia and the Ukraine joined the other nine members of the 11-member Council in the call for a cease-fire now. They abstained, however, when the other nine voted to approve start of negotiations for a settlement of the front.

Bunche traced the agreement for use by both Egypt and Israel of a desert crossroads as supply routes during the truce. This route, which connects Jewish des-

Scientist Suggests U. S. Put End to Forest Area Lightning

Scientific elimination of lightning over vast timber lands of United States to end one major cause of forest fires was recommended yesterday by a General Electric Co. weather scientist.

Dr. Vincent J. Schaefer, pioneer in scientific weather making, suggested to the United States Forest Service that potential thunderheads be transformed into plain rain or snowfall with dry-ice "seeding" techniques.

Forest Service spokesmen here said they were "keenly interested" in Dr. Schaefer's work, and were waiting to see his full report of his recent studies. They emphasized, however, that the United States Weather Bureau, which has been studying rainmaking techniques in Ohio, is the sole agency with Federal authority to "tamper with the weather."

Dr. Schaefer's recommendations were contained in a report of his studies of natural thunderstorms conducted last summer at the Priest River Forest Experiment Station, Idaho. Terming the Priest River area ideal for the purpose, he further advised Forest Service to "initiate and continue" an in-

Dixiecrats, GOP Assailed By Truman

North Carolinians Are Reminded of Carpetbagger Era After Civil War

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 19.—Here in the heart of the disgruntled South, President Truman returned to politics today with two forthright attacks on Republicans and States Rights Democrats.

He reminded the Dixiecrats, who deserted the Democratic convention in protesting his nomination, that their own Andrew Jackson "knew that the way to correct injustice in a democracy is by reason and debate, never by walking out in a huff."

And he told an audience of dirt farmers at the State Fair Grounds: "You don't have to be hit on the head twice to know who hit you the first time."

His target was not the Republican Party alone. In the same speech he spoke directly to rebellious Democrats in these words:

"You stand with the Democratic Party or you stand against it.

"You stand with the Democratic Party or for all practical purposes you stand against it."

However pleased his audiences may have been at his attacks on the GOP, they sat on their hands when he aimed his shots at Dixiecrats.

The President's farm speech, delivered this afternoon, was a barefisted dismemberment of the Republican Party's pre-depression record. He symbolized that record by recalling the "Hoovercart," which he said was indigenous to North Carolina and described as "the remains of an old tin lizzie being pulled by a mule because you couldn't afford to buy a new car or gas for the old one."

And he went even farther back in history for examples of what he said the South might expect from a Republican administration.

"You know," he said, "what Republicanism means in North Carolina and everywhere else in the South. 'First it meant rule by carpetbaggers, then it means rule by the money-baggers. Either way it means rule that treats the South and West as colonies to be exploited commercially and held down politically.

"Republicanism means that the Federal government is controlled

Nash Hikes Prices $275 to $390 on New 1949 Models

Detroit, Oct. 19 (AP).—Price increases averaging $275 on its "600" series and $390 on the "Ambassador" models were announced today by Nash Motors.

The increases apply to the new 1949 model Nash cars now in production and to be introduced publicly on October 22.

New factory list prices are: "Super 600" series: Two-door sedan, $1,688; brougham, $1,710; four-door sedan, $1,713; "Super Ambassador" series: two-door sedan, $2,109; brougham, $2,130; four-door sedan, $2,134.

George W. Mason, Nash-Kelvinator president and board chairman, said Nash had spent more than $15,000,000 on the new cars, which are drastically different from any units the company has yet produced. Mason added that Nash expenditures since the war on additional plants, expansion, modernization and new model development exceed $40,000,000.

(Nash's 1949 models will go on public display in Washington dealers' showrooms on Friday.)

Enlistments May Halve Draft Calls

High Volunteering Rate of 40,000 Monthly Likely to Bring Cut Soon

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Army officials said yesterday that draft calls this winter and spring will be cut in half if the present heavy flow of volunteers continues.

Expressing high satisfaction at the rate of regular enlistments, they reported, however, that the 18-year-old trainee program thus far has proved a flop.

Only 3202 of the teen-agers signed up in September for the one-year training—32 per cent of the Army quota. As officials had expected a long waiting list for this program—all that Congress would grant of the Administration's universal military training proposal—defense chiefs predicted that demands for passage of the full UMT plan will be pressed anew at the next session.

42,000 Enlist in Month

Regular enlistments and re-enlistments, however, totaled more than 42,000 during September, nearly as high as in August. Commenting on this continued high influx of recruits, an Army personnel expert told The Washington Post:

"If we can maintain the present level of three-year volunteers, we'll have to draft only 10,000 to 15,000 men a month through the rest of the year. We must realize, of course, that we wouldn't be getting many of the men, without Selective Service acting as a spur."

During hearings on the draft bill, Army chiefs forecast that some 35,000 men would be called up monthly after selective service got under way, with a total of about 225,000 men inducted during the current fiscal year.

Teen Age Program Slumps

But with recruits continuing to volunteer in larger numbers than had been anticipated, draft calls may not run much more than half that total.

About 50,000 enlistments or inductions are needed a month to build up the Army to its new authorized strength of 790,000 officers and men by next June. This does not include the 110,000 18-year-old trainees, which Congress authorized the Army to recruit.

On October 1, there were but 10,500 of these one-year men in uniform, 45 per cent of quota. The program started off well, with 80 per cent of the July quota enrolling, but has dropped steadily since.

The other branches of the armed forces have done better, but their allotments are much smaller.

Soviet's Berlin Blockade Tightened as Council Deliberates, U. S. Says

Post Reporter

Movie-hungry Russian audiences will soon be seeing American films because so many Soviet-made pictures have been rejected in recent months by the cultural censors in Moscow.

The Soviet government recently agreed to resume buying American films after virtually banning them for 12 years.

Details of the agreement were disclosed here yesterday by Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, who worked it out in Moscow recently with Foreign Minister Molotov and Soviet trade leaders.

In recent years Russia has been one of the few countries in the world that refused to show American films. In the early war years two American movies were enormously popular in Russia—"The Great Waltz," based on the life of the composer Johann Strauss, said to be one of Generalissimo Stalin's favorite movies, and "One Hundred Men and a Girl," with Deanna Durbin.

Both of these films, however, were bought years before the war, and no new ones from America took their places on Russian screens. American visitors in Moscow were sometimes asked whether Deanna Durbin had died, because her film was not longer being shown.

Under the new arrangement, the Russians will buy feature films in groups of 20, chosen from a list of a hundred to be submitted by the American motion picture industry. Johnston said yesterday that the Soviet government had agreed to pay for the films in dollars, had agreed to make no additions to the pictures or sound tracks although it could make deletions, and had not insisted on any reci-

West Reaffirms Stand on Lifting Restrictions; Action Possible Friday

Paris, Oct. 19 (AP).—The American delegate to the Security Council declared today that Russia was intensifying her blockade of Berlin "even as the Security Council deliberates."

Dr. Philip C. Jessup told the Council that perhaps Russia's action in forcing vehicular traffic from the Soviet zone to detour around west Berlin to the Soviet sector was "intended as a tacit reply" to the six neutrals' request for detailed information on the blockade.

He and the other Western power representatives declared the crisis could be solved only by lifting the blockade.

Adjourns Till Friday

After hearing the three Western representatives, the Council adjourned until 3 p. m. Friday, with indications that some resolution supporting their demands may be ready for action at that time.

Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Soviet deputy foreign minister, sat mute throughout the answers by British, French and American delegates to questions asked by the six neutrals of the Council.

He had served notice last week, Russia would not bite on the "bait" in these questions and be drawn into breaking her boycott of the debate.

But the Russians passed out among the delegates and correspondents an 84-page White Paper containing documents on the Berlin case. There was speculation that this was Russia's indirect answer to the neutrals' queries for more information on the Soviet position.

Neutrals Sought Details

Last Friday the six neutrals—Argentina, Belgium, Canada, Colombia, China and Syria—asked the big powers to give details of the traffic restrictions imposed on western Berlin, and an explanation of the August 30 Moscow agreement which nearly settled the case and why it was not carried out.

Jessup capped the West's answers to these questions with the charges that Russia had evaded her commitments in the August 30 agreement to lift the blockade and establish a Soviet currency in Berlin under four-power control.

He and Sir Alexander Cadogan of Britain said the Western powers could not now consider even discussing the currency problem under such duress as the blockade.

"At the very moment in which the Security Council is considering the blockade," Jessup said, "the Soviet authorities have taken additional steps to tighten it."

Citing Soviet restrictions on German vehicular traffic from the Eastern zone into the western sectors of Berlin applied yesterday, he said the blockade was now "watertight."

"Soviet Created Threat"

"The Soviet government created the threat to peace and the Soviet government can remove it," Jessup declared. "We are asking the Security Council to remove the threat to the peace, not to avoid discussion with the Soviet government but to make it possible to engage in discussions free from duress."

Cadogan said the blockade was a "planned and insidious" attempt

Baby Is Stolen As Mother Shops in Store

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—A baby girl was abducted from her carriage standing in front of a drug store where her mother was shopping today and police radio cars swung into action to comb the neighborhood.

The police radio immediately broadcast a description of the 2½-month old child, Jo Ann Mezzanotte. Her mother, hysterical over the baby's disappearance, was taken to Northeastern station, officers said.

The mother, Mrs. Dolores Mezzanotte, wife of a railroad employe, told police she had gone into the drug store to buy a baby bottle for the infant. She said she left the carriage in front of the door.

A few minutes later she returned, only to discover the child had been abducted in broad daylight and in the heart of a busy shopping center.

The infant, according to the police description, weighs 9 pounds, is black-haired and brown-eyed, was dressed in a white knitted hat with trimming, white booties and was wrapped in pink baby bunting with a zipper front.

Mrs. Mezzanotte issued a statement through police to the abductors, pleading "Don't harm my baby."

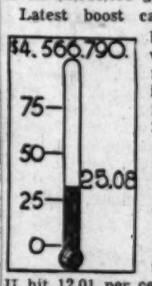
Red Feather Drive Reaches 25% of Its Goal

The 1949 Red Feather drive yesterday recorded 25.08 per cent of its $4,566,790 goal.

Latest boost came from the business units, which announced fresh intakes amounting to $290,276.55, at a luncheon in Hotel Washington.



Business unit I recorded 18.66 per cent of its $1,785,271 quota; business unit II hit 12.01 per cent of its $364,290 goal. All told, a total of $1,145,517.93 has been raised so far in the drive, more than 200 volunteer workers were informed.

Chauncey G. Parker, general campaign chairman, expressed optimism over a "decided trend" toward "increased giving." Leon Chatelain, jr., president of the Washington Board of Trade and general vice chairman of the campaign, urged "full steam ahead from here on out."

B. M. McKelway, editor of The Evening Star, in the principal address, emphasized that the Chest campaign is "an elemental responsibility of every citizen." He pointed out, moreover, that "no citizen has more at stake in its success than the citizens of the business community."

FCC Authority Questioned

Nation's Broadcasters Battle To Save Give-Away Programs

By Raymond Blair

The Nation's broadcasters went to bat yesterday before the Federal Communications Commission to save their controversial give-away programs.

The FCC has pending a set of regulations which would outlaw most of the current give-aways on the theory that they are lotteries and hence illegal.

Ten radio lawyers paraded before the commission at an all-day hearing to argue, in substance, that the FCC lacks the authority to issue the proposed rules and that the give-aways, which [illegible] out an estimated $2,500,000 yearly in prizes, are not lotteries.

An eleventh attorney, Paul A. Porter, former price administrator, called the money shows a "cancerous growth in American broadcasting." He said the commission not only has authority to regulate them, "but it also has a plain duty to take action."

Porter represented the Maryland Broadcasting Co., operators of Station WITH in Baltimore.

"Failure to act," he said, "is an invitation to shoot the works. If

New Airlift Chief, 'Uncle Joe' Cannon, Is a Past Master in Tactics—And Tact

So you think the Air Force is for young men only?. Maybe so, maybe so. Then what about "Uncle Joe" Cannon, who's pushing 57, and what fringe of hair he still has is gray?

* * * * * * *

Why, yesterday this avuncular fly-guy took over command of our air forces in Europe, and with it assumed responsibility for the success of the Berlin airlift.

Sure, there's plenty of young flying-brass around, but they don't come smarter or shrewder than "Uncle Joe"—Lieut. Gen. John K. Cannon to groundlings.

Now there's a man who's mastered both tactics and tact. They say "Uncle Joe" can make combat planes fly in five languages. By that they mean that when Cannon was running the Allied Tactical Air Force during the Mediterranean campaign, he not only got American, British, French, Italian and Brazilian units under his command to cooperate, but he also got them to coordinate their complex operations in support of the ground troops pushing up the Italian boot.

Harris & Ewing

GEN. JOHN CANNON
"Uncle Joe"

Old Home Week in Wiesbaden

It must have felt like an Old Home Week reunion when General Cannon presented his bald head, square jaw, and pug nose at headquarters in Wiesbaden, Germany. Cannon had been the big gun of that command before.

Same command. Same commander. But the job at hand as different as is building up from breaking down.

Back in 1945-6, "Uncle Joe" was concerned chiefly with salvaging a squadron or two out of the demobilization rush that followed V-J Day. Cannon's screams of anguish could be heard above the clatter, which is a remarkable thing, since even during the most trying days of the African and Mediterranean fighting "Uncle Joe" remained quiet, soft-spoken, and at times even shy.

This shyness is not to be confused with personal courage. "Uncle Joe" had plenty of what it takes, and insisted on hopping around the combat zones in a single-engine P-51 fighter.

His narrowest escape, though, occurred of all places for an air general, in the water. He was just off the southern France shore in a small boat with Generals Ira C. Eaker, another flying commander, and Jacob L. Devers, the infantryman, when a Luftwaffe bomb missed and nearly drowned them with the resulting splash.

Originator of Air Tactics

General Cannon, always popular with his men, holds high repute among the Air Force's high-ranking officers. He is credited with developing many of the tactical air combat doctrines.

"Uncle Joe" is a native of Salt Lake City, married to a Utah girl. They've three daughters. One's married, one's attending college, and the third, Margaret, will join her dad in Germany with her mother.

The European air commander joined the Army in World War I three years after graduating from Utah Agricultural College. He moved into the Air Corps in 1921, and soon thereafter smashed his nose in a crash. During the years preceding the second World War, "Uncle Joe" received a variety of training, and even served a hitch with the U. S. Military Mission to Argentina in 1938. He served overseas most of World War II. His most recent post was chief of the Air Training Command, at Barksdale Field, La.

On at least one occasion Cannon is known to have disobeyed orders—or perhaps it would be fairer to say that he interpreted the orders loosely.

Anyhow, when the invasion of southern France was undertaken, high commanders were ordered not to take unnecessary personal risks. Came D-Day, and Cannon's lads took off to silence Nazi defense guns and planes.

And who should be out there with them, flying his own fighter? "Uncle Joe," of course, getting in a few whacks of his own.

Once, "Uncle Joe" had to crash-land and ditch his P-51 Mustang. He wrote to Gen. Carl "Toohey" Spaatz telling of the accident, and outlining the procedure he used in ditching, and requested another fighter plane for his personal use.

General Spaatz wrote back that the Air Corps was thenceforth adopting Cannon's ditching procedure as the safest method, but refused the request for another craft, explaining:

"We can get more P-51's but we can't get another 'Joe' Cannon."

Bizonia to Aid Blockaded Berlin Areas

Frankfurt, Germany, Oct. 19 (AP).—Bizonia's economic council today voted a tax levy of 25 million marks monthly (about $2,500,000) to aid the economy of Berlin's blockaded western sectors.

Communist Deputy Fritz Sperling protested the tax would "hit the poorest of the working people," but he was shouted down by other deputies. Sperling said "the Communist Party is not willing to contribute one pfennig to the capitalists working for a new war."

The council is the top German agency in the combined British and American zones. It voted to start its tax program in December for a three-month period. The levy will be earmarked for the purchase of raw materials and consumer goods for Berlin's western sectors.

The law provides for a tax of 60 pfennigs (6 cents) for incomes of not more than 500 marks monthly ($50). Higher incomes will be taxed at the rate of 1 mark for each 100 marks of income. In addition a new 2-pfennig tax (about .2 of a cent) will be placed on postage.

Gen. Cannon to Meet Any Eventuality

Wiesbaden, Germany, Oct. 19 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. John K. Cannon, new United States Air Force commander in Europe, said today he is taking measures to meet any eventuality.

He was asked at a news conference whether the Air Force is making any preparations against the possibility of war. He responded:

"With the forces available we are taking measures to meet any eventuality—whatever it may be. As far as the United States goes, our aim is not to start war, but to prevent war. We want peace. Any wise country prepares for its own protection. Whatever rearming the United States is doing is done to preserve peace."

U. S., Britain, Canada Back New Atom Plan

Paris, Oct. 19 (NYHT).—Bowing to the fears and demands of a parade of small and medium-sized countries, the United States, Canada and Britain agreed today to a slightly revised formula which would specifically direct a continuation of the work of the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission.

The Soviet Union and Poland at once opposed this new formula, which they said represented no compromise at all with the Russian-bloc position.

Until today, the American-British-Canadian position was set forth in an amended Canadian resolution up for consideration before the Assembly's Political Committee. It called for indorsement of the majority plan and asked that the Big Five and Canada consult regularly to determine when there was enough evidence of a Russian-Western agreement to warrant sending the Atomic Energy Commission back to work.

Canadian delegate Lionel Chevrier announced today that he was adding the following paragraph to his resolution: "Meanwhile the General Assembly calls upon the Atomic Energy Commission to resume its session, to survey its program of work, and to proceed to the further study of such of the subjects remaining in the program of work as it considers to be practicable and useful."

Death Penalty Abolition Rejected by U. N. Group

Paris, Oct. 19 (U.P.).—The United Nations Social Committee today rejected a Russian proposal that the U. N. declaration on human rights condemn the use of the death penalty in peacetime.

Instead, the committee accepted an article that "everyone has a right to life, liberty and security of person." Yugoslavia refused to vote on grounds the article did not guarantee "against freedom from lynching."

The Motion Picture Export Association in New York Monday night approved Johnston's deal.

Although Johnston declined to say why the Russians had made the deal after years of a virtual ban, it is known here that the Soviet government has had trouble in getting enough full-length films from its own studios.

The Soviet Union has plenty of film-making resources, but one Soviet film after another has been rejected because of ideological "errors." Konstantin Simonov's play attacking the American press, "The Russian Question," which was shown in hundreds of legitimate theaters throughout the Soviet Union, was made into a movie, but promptly withdrawn, because something in it did not please the ideological censors in the government.

The result, according to Americans recently returned from Moscow, is that Soviet cinemas often have nothing to show but dreary re-issues of heavy propaganda films made long ago. Soviet audiences want entertainment in their movies and have not been getting enough of it.

Presumably the American feature-length films will be used as bait to get audiences into the movie houses and see Soviet propaganda shorts, which have always been plentiful.

Johnson said yesterday that the Russians were especially interested in musicals, dramas and historical films. He said the lists to be submitted to the Russians would contain "what we think are the best pictures." He quickly amended this to say they would be films "that most accurately reflect American life, or are the most entertaining, or have the most merit."

He said he had not decided whether the industry would consult the State Department in choosing the titles to be submitted to the Russians. He indicated that the lists would be made up from thousands of titles that have accumulated in the years since the Russians last bought American films.

In addition to making his deal with Russia, Johnston made a similar agreement with Marshal Tito's government in Yugoslavia. These two, he said, were the only countries in the world that had not been buying American movies.

He also made an agreement with the Communist government in Czechoslovakia to buy American films in lots of 25; he made important currency agreements for the American film industry in France and Italy; he put into effect an arrrangement for showing all-American programs in British cinemas; and also got the Franco government in Spain to lift its ban against the film "Gentlemen's Agreement."

"I don't think we'll have war in the foreseeable future," he said, summing up the impressions of his journey. "But we're going to have a long period of tension in the world. I don't think anyone in this room will see the end of it."

He said that "invective and blind fury" would not cure the evil of communism, nor would war cure the problems of the world. The struggle against communism, he thought, "must be fought on the worker level."

He felt there was no better way to combat communism, and to fight European notions of an "imperialist" America, than to have labor unions here invite more labor leaders to visit the United States. He also thought American newspapers should invite more journalists from Europe so that "liberal groups" across the Atlantic could understand America better.

Johnston Favors Full Ties With Spain

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, called again yesterday for full diplomatic relations with Spain even though he is "opposed" to Generalissimo Franco.

"We fool no one when we give Franco a charge (d'affaires) and not an Ambassador," Johnston told newsmen.

The United States withdrew its Ambassador from Spain in 1946 after the United Nations condemned Franco's government.

East-West split. On the other, it attacked him as a "sower of war" and said his visit to Italy was directed toward strengthening military solidarity in western Europe.

A comment in the Vatican City newspaper L'Osservatore Romano, written by its director, Count Giuseppe Dalla Torre, said a third world war would be "suicide" and that plans for peace "are in full development among continuous obstacles."

It said the views of the Secretary of State and Pope "turn toward the same objective" for moral, political and economic reasons. Other Vatican sources said the cordial conversation touched upon "matters of interest to the peace of the world and the welfare of mankind."

After the audience with the Pope, Marshall, accompanied by Mrs. Marshall, drove to Nettuno Cemetery near Anzio beachhead and visited the grave of Lieut. Allen Tupper Brown, Mrs. Marshall's son, who was killed May 29, 1944.

Kennedy Sworn in As Ontario Premier

Toronto, Oct. 19 (AP).—Thomas L. Kennedy became Premier of Ontario today. He was sworn in by Lieutenant-Governor Ray Lawson who earlier received the resignation of George Drew, recently elected national leader of the Progressive Conservative Party.

Labor Party Proposes Single Defense for 16 ERP Nations

London, Oct. 19 (AP).—The British Labor Party today proposed the creation of a single defense force for the 16 European Recovery Program nations.

It said such an organization would bind the countries so tightly "that the task of unscrambling the eggs to create separate national forces again would be almost impossible."

The party, which is the dominant force behind the British Labor Government, made the proposal in a pamphlet reviewing the steps toward European unity taken since Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin coined the phrase "Western Union" last January.

It opposes projects for a political federation, but advocates enthusiastically development of economic union on the basis of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation and the military union as an expansion of the five-power Brussels pact.

"The fall of Czechoslovakia exposes the futility of the argument that if western Europe declared her peaceful intentions she would need no force at all," said the section devoted to defense.

"The tragic lesson of the last few years is that Russia has no respect for good will without power. . . . At the moment Europe's most valuable military protection against aggression from the East is the few thousand American troops in Germany and Austria, because their presence would involve the U. S. A. immediately in any European war."

War Plans Laid for Airlines

The Air Force and civilian airlines are working on mobilization plans which would give the Government virtual control of the 1354-plane commercial fleet in event of war.

This was disclosed yesterday with publication of a letter from Maj. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, commander of the Military Air Transport Service (MATS), to the Independent Air Carrier Association, nonscheduled fliers trade organization.

Both scheduled and nonscheduled carriers are working with MATS on the plans.

Inclosed with Kuter's letter was a proposed contract which would go into effect on the outbreak of war. Similar contracts have been sent to the scheduled airlines.

Kuter said the contract "obligates the contractor to perform any services, within his capabilities, that are requested of him by this command."

to oust the Western powers from Berlin.

So long as it remains, he continued, it was to be feared "any scheme" for a settlement would meet the same fate as the August 30 agreement.

Alexandre Praodi of France told the Council the French government agreed with the British and Americans that the Soviet government seemed less intent on settling the Berlin case than on prolonging it.

The Soviet White Paper contained 14 documents on the Berlin case, beginning with the February 13 Russian note to the United States, Britain and France declaring she would not recognize their agreement to set up a West German government.

It charged that the plan aimed at setting up an American "colony" in Germany as a "strategic base of future aggression in Europe."

Also included were statements by Soviet Marshal Vassily Sokolovsky in Berlin calling upon the western members of the Allied Control Council to give full details of decisions of the London Conference, his later declaration that the introduction of a new currency in West Germany "completes the division of Germany," and that counter-measures were being taken to "protect the interests" of the Soviet zone.

Turkish Women Start Military Training

Istanbul (U.P.).—Turkish women are taking military training and learning how to shoot guns for the first time in the country's modern history.

The program began last year with simple nurse training under military supervision.

It is a war-time measure, but Turkish officials are thinking in terms of preparedness. They saw how America and England made good use of women in their armies during the war and decided it was time for Turkish women to learn how to defend their country.

Using last year's nursing course as a beginning, officials this year designed courses which now include antiaircraft operation, radar operation, communications, transport and supply.

Aubrey S. Eban of Israel told the Council Bunche's report did not "accurately and objectively" give the picture. Eban said Egypt was guilty of "double violations" of the agreement.

In rebuttal, Bunche declared Israel refused to permit the U. N. to establish an observer post along the agreed convoy route.

Outside the Council, Representative Emmanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) charged the United States and Britain forced Count Bernadotte to recommend that the Arabs be given the Negev. Dr. Bunche, informed of the charge made by Celler at a news conference, said it was not ture.

Metropolitan Season To Open November 29

New York, Oct. 19 (U.P.).—Metropolitan Opera's sixty-fourth season will open November 29, with Verdi's "Otello," it was announced today. It will run to March 19.

Edward Johnson, general manager, said the 1948 season would see the revival of five works absent from the repertory for several years. They are "L'Amore Dei Tre Re," "L'Elisir D'Amore," "Falstaff," "Mignon" and "Salome."

Chetnik Gets Death Sentence in Belgrade

Belgrade, Oct. 19 (NYHT).—Andrija Loncharich, 37, a one-time Chetnik parachutist who said he was sent to Yougoslavia by former King Peter last January to revive the Chetnik underground and prepare for a rightist revolution against Premier Marshal Tito, was condemned to death by firing squad in Belgrade District Court tonight.

The main charges against him were espionage and conspiracy to overthrow the government.

Troops Fight Reds For French Mines

Awaiting Trial

Brauchitsch, Nazi Army Leader, Dies

MARSHAL BRAUCHITSCH
was awaiting trial

Hamburg, Germany, Oct. 19 (AP).—Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German armies until Hitler fired him after reverses in Russia, died at a British army hospital last night while awaiting trial on war crimes charges.

Von Brauchitsch, 67, died of coronary thrombosis. His wife was reported near death in the hospital from the same heart condition. She had been brought to the hospital to be near her husband in his final hours.

Von Brauchitsch was being held along with two other German field marshals—Gerd von Rundsted, and Erich von Mannstein, for trial on war crimes charges scheduled to begin sometime in January.

Last August Basil Henry Liddell Hart, British military commentator, accused Britain of "needless cruelty" in the treatment of the field marshals. He charged that Von Brauchitsch had been "twice at death's door" while a British prisoner.

Winston Churchill also had declared their impending trial a "stupidity."

Von Brauchitsch was named commander in chief of the German armies by Hitler in February, 1938. He was appointed to Hitler's second cabinet council and with Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering and Grand Admiral Erich Raeder formed a triumvirate that guided Germany's military might in the first years of the war.

In December, 1941, he was replaced as commander in chief after the eastern front disaster.

Von Brauchitsch was a member of the German general staff in the First World War.

Paris, Oct. 19 (U.P.).—Troops and Republican Guards stormed into central France's strike-bound coal mines against fierce Communist-led resistance today in a last-minute attempt to keep the untended pits from being flooded.

Forty men were injured in a hand-to-hand fight at one pit-head.

Interior Minister Jules Moch, warned by the prefect of the Loire Department that there were "only a few hours left to avoid the total loss of these pits," rushed reinforcements to Saint Etienne, in the center of the Loire coal basin.

By midafternoon, 10,000 steel-helmeted troops had rolled into the town in tanks, armored cars and trucks. Soldiers forced their way into 20 pits, and engineers went to work pumping water out of them.

Reds Swing Crowbars

The most serious clash was at the Roche-La-Moliere pit at Saint Etienne, where troops and guards, wielding rifles and hurling tear gas grenades, fought their way through barricades defended by Communists swinging crowbars. Twenty guards and 20 strikers were injured.

Strikers succeeded in flooding the Laberaudiere mine near St. Etienne along with five other mines in southeast France near Albi.

Small-scale fighting broke out at Carmaux, near Albi, when 1500 strikers armed with stones and crowbars, and led by Roger Carraudy, Communist parliamentary deputy, seized the important electric power station guarded by troops.

Further trouble appeared inevitable as hundreds of miners, barricaded behind iron gates, still held important pits.

Moch ordered security forces to save the mines "at all costs." Most maintenance men who walked off their jobs yesterday in a scheduled 24-hour strike stayed away again today on orders of Communist leaders, despite government warnings that pits were flooding and that many miners were threatened with months-long unemployment.

Some Miners Go Back

In some parts of the country miners defied Communist orders and continued normal maintenance work. In Lorraine, there was a strong back-to-work movement. Officials said 40 per cent of the miners were back at their jobs.

In the north, about 100 non-Communist miners tried to return to work at the Le Forest pit, but they were stopped by strong-arm men and, after a brief brawl, went home.

The mine strike, in its sixteenth day, already has cost France 2,400,000 tons of vitally needed coal and an estimated eight million dollars (United States) in lost man hours.

Enlistments May Cut Draft

of the unexpected failure of the training plan to date. Start of actual inductions of men under the draft next month may stimulate the one-year enrollments, he said, but otherwise less than half of the 161,000 18-year-olders authorized this year will be obtained.

Army officials listed three reasons for the failure of the program:

1. The long period of active reserve status required of graduates of the one-year training program—four to six years. Many youths, it was said, are signing up for three-year tricks—which carry no reserve service obligation.

2. The fact that most 18-year-olds are in school and therefore are safe from the draft until next summer, even though nearing the minimum draft age—19.

3. Army recruiters—like other salesmen—have been "pushing" their most profitable line of goods, enlistments for three years or more. The Department of the Army, however, recently has issued them instructions to stop this practice.

The 18-year-old volunteer training plan originated among members of the Senate Armed Services Committee last spring after it became apparent that Congress would not accept UMT. They sold it to the Pentagon as a partial substitute to build up trained reserves.

Under it, 18-year-old youths can sign up for a year's training within continental United States, then go into the reserve for four to six years and be exempt from the 21-month draft. A limit of 110,000 in the Army, 15,000 in the Air Force, and 36,000 in the Navy and Marine Corps was fixed and officials predicted heavy competition for the jobs.

1,531,881 Now in Services

Forrestal's announcement revealed that the Armed Forces accepted 75,315 enlistments and reenlistments during September to bring the total strength to 1,531,881. This was an increase of about 37,000 over September 1.

Here are the September recruiting figures with the estimated total strength for each service on October 1 shown in parenthesis: Army, 45,144 (635,000); Air Force, 12,032(406,000); Navy, 14,751(413,476); Marine Corps, 3088 (77,405).

Second Greek Killing Feared

Athens, Greece, Oct. 18 (AP).—The radio of Communist guerilla chief Markos Vafiades declared tonight that Columbia Broadcasting System's correspondent George Polk was murdered by "monarcho-Fascists" and that the same thing may happen to Kenneth Matthews, British Broadcasting Corp. correspondent.

Matthews was abducted in the Peloponnesus on October 11 and is still missing. Unconfirmed reports from official Greek sources two days ago said he had been seen in a restaurant in rebel-held territory.

Prime Minister Sophoulis and Minister of Public Order Constantine Rentis expressed concern for Matthews' safety when informed of the guerilla broadcast. Sophoulis said the Communists might kill Matthews in an attempt "to get Greece into trouble again."

Rentis said the Communists reported the death in action four months ago of Adam Mouzenides, accused by the government of being the trigger man in the Polk murder. Rentis said it was suspected the report was put out to confuse authorities investigating the death of Polk. The government said Polk was shot in a boat in Salonika Bay on May 8.

(Miltiades Jorphygrogenis, Minister of Justice in the "Free Greece Government" of Markos, declared in Prague, Czechoslovakia, that he had a complete record of the killers of Polk, and that they were not Communists.

Wading In From Mexico . . .

LABORERS CROSS THE RIO—When United States Immigration Service officials abandoned efforts to halt illegal entry of Mexican farm hands into this country, the Mexicans waded across the Rio Grande River. An estimated 4000 Mexicans have crossed the border from Juarez in a week

U. S. Efforts in Greece Set Back By Additions to Rebel Ranks

American efforts in Greece have had a setback with the emergence of a new force of between 4000 and 6000 guerillas near Vitsi, south of the place where the Greek, Albanian and Yugoslav frontiers meet.

This force and the method of dealing with it were among the subjects discussed by Secretary Marshall during his brief visit to Athens last weekend.

Here in Washington there is plenty of confidence that the Greek army can cope with the guerillas, but the appearance of the new concentration is described as "disappointing." It is disappointing because it has come just when the back of the guerilla movement seemed broken.

Informed quarters here had hoped that the Greek army's victories around Mount Grammos in August would have crippled the guerilla movement for good. Secretary Marshall had expressed the hope publicly on August 25 that the Grammos campaign would reduce the guerilla movement to negligible proportions, although he warned that total extinction of the rebel forces would be difficult because of the mountainous terrain.

Now the guerillas are back in considerable strength in the north and in all parts of Greece their number is believed to be about 25,000, compared to the estimated total of 21,000 a year ago, before American military aid got under way. There is little doubt here that the Vitsi group slipped back into Greece after having been reformed and reequipped, and partially recruited as well, in Albania and Yugoslavia across the northern border.

The presence of the rebels at Vitsi means that the Greek Army probably will have to make another major effort, comparable to the Grammos campaign, to dislodge them. It is not, however, regarded here as a danger to Greece, because conditions in the country as a whole have improved greatly in the past year.

A year ago there was a real danger that the guerillas might swoop down upon the great Port of Salonika. They had their "capital" in the northern mountains, and the Greek army was badly equipped and badly led.

Today the Greek army is regarded here as far more efficient than it was. In Greece itself, roads have been built, harbors cleared, inflation held in check and taxes collected as never before.

For these reasons, Secretary Marshall is believed to have been thinking of the general tension in Europe rather than of Greece when he told the press at Athens that he could not comment because of the "critical situation."

Truman Asks Record Of Koch Case Inquiry

President Truman yesterday asked for a Senate Committee's record of its investigation into the commutation of the life sentence of Ilse Koch.

The call for the transcript of secret interrogation of witnesses followed by a day announcement that the President had asked the Army for a full report on its action reducing the Koch sentence to four years, with provision for her release next year.

Chinese Lolos Dread A-Bomb Less Than Homicidal Magic

Black magic warfare is more terrifying to the savage Lolos of western China than civilization's destroying power, the atom bomb, Washington anthropologists were told here last night.

The speaker was Dr. David C. Graham, veteran missionary to China, student of tribal customs, and longtime collector of Chinese bugs and animals for the Smithsonian Institution.

Dr. Graham addressed a meeting of the Anthropological Society of Washington, at the National Museum, on the "Customs and Religion of the Lolos," the fierce mountain tribesmen who, persistent rumors said, enslaved American airmen downed in their lands in World War II.

Concerning the rumors which caused American authorities to send a special expedition of three Americans disguised as missionaries into Lolo-land, Dr. Graham said he was assured by Lolo chieftains there are no white men in the territory, now.

"One chief told me that a party of six or eight airmen had been captured, and that two resisted and were killed," he said. "The others, he told me, were taken off as captives, and later disappeared. Whether they escaped, were let go, or ever reached the outside world safely, he did not know," said Dr. Graham.

The missionary, who told of visiting "fringe" area tribes, said he reported the version to American investigators who later announced that the enslavement rumors were apparently without foundation.

Regarding black magic, Dr. Graham told his audience that Lolos, who love to fight, have deathly fears lest their adversaries make off with some of their hair, or even parts of their garments.

For out of such, he said, are fashioned likenesses of their original owners. These are then stuck with pins, trampled and otherwise battered to the accompaniment of incantations, causing death to the human counterparts.

Such deaths do result, Dr. Graham said, adding, however, that he was never able to verify a single report of such a death among victims who did not know "they were being worked on."

To counteract the black magic dealings, witch doctors called Sutoes can ward off the evil, for a price, he said.

Jap Cabinet Is Installed

Tokyo, Oct. 19 (NYHT).—Japan's first single-party cabinet since the nation surrendered was installed today, with Shigeru Yoshida, an old-line tory diplomat, as Premier, Foreign Minister and Attorney General.

For the first time since the surrender, also, frank admission was made by the Japanese government and Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters that the names of all the prospective ministers were submitted to General MacArthur by the Premier for approval.

Premier Yoshida took his cabinet to visit Emperor Hirohito for the attestation ceremony.

Chinese Government Denies Changchun's Fall to Reds

Nanking (Wednesday), Oct. 20 (AP).—The Chinese Communists claimed today they had captured the Manchurian capital of Changchun, but a government military spokesman denied it promptly.

A Communist broadcast from north China said the city, which has been besieged for more than a year, was taken when the United States-equipped new Seventh Army surrendered.

The military spokesman said the Seventh, led by Gen. Li Hung, who is a veteran of the Burma campaign, was still fighting.

The spokesman added, however, that part of the Sixtieth Army along with its commander, Gen. Tseng Tse-sheng, had been captured by the Communist attackers.

The issue of whether the government can cling to its precarious Manchurian foothold around Mukden now is being fought out southwest of Mukden.

Progovernment reports reaching Peiping asserted Nationalist troops were only 6 miles south of Chinhsien, vital government base which fell last week. It is 125 miles southwest of Mukden.

Air Force Drops Plans For All-Weather Jets

The Air Force today canceled plans for producing the Curtiss Wright F-87, the first all-weather fighter ever powered by four jet engines.

It explained that it needs planes for military requirements "other than those for which the F-87 was designed."

The Air Force had ordered 88 of the planes at an industry-estimated cost of 60 million dollars.

Two Tell of Plot To Murder Reuther

Detroit, Oct. 19 (AP).—An alleged assassination plot aimed at union leader Walter P. Reuther and one of his top aides was outlined in court today by a pair of convicted burglars.

John Miller, a 45-year-old former factory worker, and John Pantella, 43, a former member of the CIO-United Auto Workers, testified that Carl Bolton offered $15,000 to have Reuther and Kenneth Bannon killed.

Bannon is head of the union's Ford department.

Their testimony was part of the 39-year-old Bolton's examination on a charge of assault with intent to kill. Reuther was severely wounded April 20 by a shotgun blast.

Bolton, a former minor official in the CIO-UAW, later today was held for trial under $75,000 bond. The maximum penalty is life imprisonment.

Describing himself as a former convict who served three prison terms for burglary, Miller testified that Bolton offered him not only the $15,000 but also "a good job with the union" if he killed Reuther.

He said Bolton had approached him as early as September, 1947, with the word "that something was coming up." Then, in March of 1948, Bolton again mentioned the proposal, Miller testified.

On April 16, four days before Reuther was shot, Miller testified, Bolton came back again, and this time "the name of Walter Reuther came up." Bolton spoke of "rubbing out Walter Reuther," the witness said.

Miller testified that Bolton promised "you'll get it (the $15,000) within an hour after the job is done."

But, the witness continued, he refused to take part.

The day before Reuther was shot, Miller testified, Bolton again came to his house to pick up two shotguns he had left there, and said, "I'm going out and get myself a——Commie!"

Bannon also was an intended victim, Miller said.

"I don't know how his name came up," he testified, "but he was supposed to get it the same way as Reuther did."

Pantella and Miller are awaiting sentence in Pontiac, Mich., on a burglary conviction.

Before the pair appeared on the witness stand, the red-headed Reuther, his arm still in a sling from the shotgun blast, testified about the events of the night of the shooting.

NLRB Attorney Assails ITU

By The Associated Press

Attorneys for the National Labor Relations Board yesterday accused the AFL International Typographical Union of waging a four-year fight to preserve closed-shop conditions in newspaper composing rooms contrary to State and Federal labor laws.

The Government attorneys asked the NLRB to broaden considerably the findings of NLRB Trial Examiner Arthur Leff that the ITU has violated the Taft-Hartley law.

In a brief, asides of NLRB General Counsel Robert N. Denham said evidence produced in hearings reflects "an unchanging attitude and determination on the part of the ITU, commencing with the first State anti-closed shop laws in 1944 to the present moment, that its three objectives shall not be affected in any way by any public law."

Illinois Wage Offer By Bell Is Approved

A Bell telephone company proposal to boost wages $2 to $4 a week for 11,000 Illinois traffic employes was approved here yesterday by the executive board of the Communications Workers of America (Ind.).

The action, following rejection of previous offers—including two in Washington—was viewed by CWA President Joseph A. Beirne as a possible break in the system-wide deadlock over wage boosts. Officials said it was the first wage agreement covering CWA workers to be reached in collective bargaining this year.

The new wage proposals provide increases in service observer rates and in night differential payments which raise the maximum increase to as much as $7 a week, a spokesman said. He noted that workers received 1.1 cent an hour more last spring as a so-called total third round pay increase of 9.9 cents an hour.

The Washington Telephone Traffic Union, covering some 3000 area workers, last week rejected an offer of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. here to increase wages $2 to $4 weekly. Mrs. Mary Gannon, president, said yesterday the offer to Illinois workers was actually higher because of greater distribution of top rates.

In Detroit, meanwhile, three prominent educators were named by Gov. Kim Sigler yesterday to try to head off a threatened strike of 18,500 Michigan Bell Telephone Co. employes.

Union Leader Defies Probers

By the United Press

An official of the United Public Workers Union (CIO) refused to tell a congressional committee yesterday whether he is a Communist, but three other union members said they never were associated with the party or its organizations.

Abraham Lederman, president of the UPW's New York teachers' affiliate, cited the first and fifth amendments to the Constitution in support of his refusal to answer.

"I regard questions concerning my personal opinions and beliefs as being outside the jurisdiction of a congressional committee," he said.

The union officials testified before a House Labor Subcommittee investigating communism in labor unions.

Those answering "no" to the "Are you a Communist" question were Isidore Rubin, an English teacher at Manual Training High School in Brooklyn; Max Diamond, editor of the New York Teacher News, the Teachers' Union publication, and Homer Sloane, chairman of the Veterans' Administration local of the Public Workers Union in New York.

Rubin was asked whether he was a member of the Communist Party when he won an Army contest and $500 during the war on "What Victory Means to Me."

"I'm not, but I consider that question a violation of everything that I stand for," he replied. "It negates everything this essay stood for."

U. S., Canadian, Scotch Distillers Take Issue On Label, Scotch-Type Whiskies Before ATU

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

American, Scotch and Canadian whiskymakers yesterday put on a performance before the Alcohol Tax Unit that might have had for its theme song: "Who threw the overalls in Mrs. Murphy's whisky?"

Americans charged that Scotch whisky coming into the country today isn't what its supposed to be. It's been "debased both as to age and to content without notice to the American consumer," one of them charged.

The Scotch argued that American distillers shouldn't be allowed to put out "Scotch-type" whisky. The Americans blend their whisky with neutral spirits, they claimed, which the Scotch wouldn't think of using.

Wants Labels on Scotch

Oscar Cox, Washington lawyer for the Kinsey Distilling Co. of Philadelphia, urged the tax unit to force Scotch distillers to put the same kind of a label on their products that Americans must use. That label tells just what is in the bottle—the age of the whiskies and how they are made. The law, he said, fixes a "double standard"—one for American distillers and another for foreign whiskymakers.

"As a result of this double standard in labeling regulations," Cox said, "the American consumer still believes that he is getting the same aged Scotch—8 or more years old—that he got before the war, whereas most Scotch imported now is 3 years old, the statutory minimum of the United Kingdom."

Cox offered a survey to show that 52 per cent of the Scotch drinkers in this country think their Scotch is older than it actually is. The survey made by National Analysts, Inc., of Philadelphia, matched a survey presented by the Scotch group. That, made by Elmo Roper, indicated that few purchasers of Scotch could tell the difference in the bottles between genuine Scotch and "Scotch-type" American whisky.

The battle among the distillers developed into a three-way affair before the hearing ended.

Against "Type" Whiskies

1. The Scotch and Canadian whiskymakers want to stop "type" whiskies. In other words, they want American distillers to be stopped from making "Scotch-type" or "Canadian-type" whisky. They say that Americans who want to make "type" whisky are just trying to "trespass on the good will" that Scotch and Canadian distillers have built up over the years.

2. Kinsey and several other distillers who weren't interested in making "type" whiskies, want to force the Scotch and Canadian distillers to tell on their labels what their whiskies contain.

3. Still another group doesn't want any changes in the regulations at all—they want the Scotch to keep labeling as now and the Americans to be permitted to keep making "type" whisky.

Satellite Student Exchange Backed

Secretary of State Marshall was advised yesterday that the United States should keep the door open for exchange of students and scientists with Soviet-dominated eastern Europe.

A newly created advisory commission said, however, that the department should not encourage American students to undertake "immature and inexperienced study under present conditions" in that area.

The commission said "careful control" is needed over the admission of persons from Communist-run countries. It suggested controls, too, over the travels of Americans going abroad under sponsorship of organizations "recognized as subversive."

The group said this country should be "more liberal" in admitting foreign delegates to international conventions here.

The commission, headed by Chancellor Harvie Branscomb of Vanderbilt University, was named to advise on educational exchanges with other countries. It turned in its report after a two-day session.

"For the United States to close its doors to all contacts with those nations with whose philosophy it disagrees would be to pull down an iron curtain on our own side of the Atlantic," Marshall was told.

It added, however, that the United States Government itself should not sponsor educational exchanges with eastern Europe because these countries are "unwilling to reciprocate."

It said its proposal to keep open the door applied to unofficial exchanges.

American officials, Marshall was told, should issue passport visas to individuals wanting to come to the United States for "serious and bona fide academic, professional or vocational purposes," but limit the stay to not more than one year, subject to renewal.

The commission also recommended that the State Department avoid arrangement with American universities, libraries and museums permitting them to retain temporary custody of art objects brought to this country from Europe by returning soldiers or other means.

In Montgomery

House Still In Middle Of Avenue

The Montgomery County government yesterday admitted defeat in its efforts to hasten the snaillike progress of a house-moving project in Bethesda.

Still blocking traffic in the middle of the 7200 block, Arlington ave., four days after expiration of a 72-hour ultimatum issued by the commissioners, the house yesterday was still a block short of its destination.

In transit almost three weeks, the house, owned by Thomas W. Perry, Bethesda fuel dealer, is being moved by Basil R. Frazier, Gaithersburg house mover, on greased skids.

County Commissioner Wesley I. Sauter, who favored direct action to get the house out of the street, was overruled yesterday by his colleagues on the commission, who voted to allow Perry "a reasonable time" in which to have the house moved.

At its regular meeting in Rockville, the commissioners granted a permit they had previously revoked for operation of the J. Enos Ray Kindergarten, to be conducted in Takoma Park Municipal Building beginning today.

The permit was revoked on October 12 because it was issued prior to approval of the premises by health and safety officials. Required approval was noted yesterday and the permit was reissued.

Approximately 25 children will attend each of the two sessions daily.

Lane to Use Two-Edge Ax On 'Gigantic' Budget Bids

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—Governor Lane declared tonight he is going to work on Maryland's next budget with a "sharp, double-bitted ax at hand."

He said he had not yet received departmental requests but understood "they reflect a gigantic proposed increase in expenditures."

The budget for the next biennium stands as the "top order of business," the Governor said in a radio address.

In a report on his administration, the Governor listed these as major accomplishments:

1. The projected Chesapeake Bay bridge, on which construction "in all probability will begin within five weeks."

2. A road building and betterment program amounting to 50 million dollars this year.

3. Higher pay for teachers, new schools, whittling down of classroom population and a record enrollment at teachers' colleges.

4. Restoration and revamping of the State House and Court of Appeals building.

5. An option to buy the O'Sullivan Building for State offices in Baltimore, which he said he negotiated personally.

Some opponents of the Bay Bridge were sincere, the Governor said, but others "made no effort to inform themselves."

He also promised to approve authorization of another 70 million dollars for school construction. More than 80 million dollars has already been authorized.

Gavel Changes Hands . . .

The Washington Post

ORDER OF NEW BUSINESS—Jack Blank (left), retiring president of the Federation of Businessmen's Association, turns the gavel over to the organization's new president, Benjamin Striner. Ceremony took place last night at a dinner in the Mayflower Hotel

New officers of the Federation of Business Men's Associations were installed last night following the association's annual election and banquet at the Mayflower Hotel.

The new officers are: President, Dr. Benjamin Striner, 7800 Orchid st. nw.; 1st vice president, Jerome B. McKee, 3800 New Hampshire ave. nw.; 2d vice president, Samuel Barrow, 1321 Connecticut ave. nw.; secretary, Louis F. Frick, 124 7th st. se.; and treasurer, John L. Sullivan, 3614 Jocelyn st. nw.

Following his installation as president, Dr. Striner said the Association in the coming year would "go all out for a sales tax for the District, but would fight to have District income and personal property taxes reduced or eliminated. He promised support for an "improved" Community Chest and cooperation with the District government and all civic bodies.

the commission doesn't act, I can envision a program called "you ain't seen nothing yet.'"

Porter said he feared that if the FCC is "intimidated by the legal arguments" of the counsel present, many radio stations would be forced by competitive pressure to put on give-aways. He urged the Commission to issue the rules so that a court test may be had of the FCC's authority.

Isaac W. Digges, of the Radio Council of National Advertisers, said Porter, a former FCC chairman himself, advocated a "sort of trial by error."

"The poor licensee must sit by in purgatory and perhaps sometime there'll be a judicial determination," he commented.

One brief in opposition to the regulations was filed by Bruce Bromley, of counsel for the American Broadcasting Co., Inc. ABC puts on the "Stop the Music" show, estimated to have an audience of 14,000,000.

Bromley contended that "Stop the Music" doesn't fit the legal definition of a lottery since, he said, chance plays only a minor part in winning the prize money and listeners give up nothing more than their time in order to listen to it. He said it was mainly a game of skill.

"Is not the skill involved largely the ability to read?" Wayne Coy, FCC chairman asked. "The name of the mystery tune (guessing of which results in a prize) is published widely and broadcast by commentators."

FCC Authority Questioned

Don Petty, general counsel of the National Association of Broadcasters, said the industry was unanimously opposed to "broadcasting designed to 'buy' the radio audience by requiring it to listen in hope of reward." However, he said, the FCC has no right to make the proposed regulations, which, he said, are an interference with free speech.

Julius Brauner, attorney for the Columbia Broadcasting System, said that if the FCC felt a particular program was illegal, it should complain to the Justice Department.

Gustav B. Margraf, counsel for the National Broadcasting Company Inc., also questioned the FCC's authority in this case but urged it to make up its mind as swiftly as possible "because broadcasters are at a loss as to which way to proceed."

W. Theodore Pierson, Washington, D. C. radio attorney, told the commissioners they faced writing a regulation that went too far or one that was too weak.

"Do you suppose we could win Solomon in a jackpot?" Chairman Coy asked him.

Arlington Show Defended

Frank U. Fletcher appeared to defend a give-away program formerly aired over Station WARL, Arlington, Va. The commission recently issued a cease-and-desist order against the show "Dollars for Answers," contending it was a lottery.

Fletcher argued that the show "possessed none of the evils of so-called lotteries." He said it was "obviously based on skill," since contestants, called to the telephone, won prizes for answering factual questions such as "When did Will Rogers die?" and "In 1945 how many telephone subscribers were there in Palestine?"

The commission announced no decision in the case.

Bromley argued that Congress intended that violations of the law banning lotteries on the radio would be prosecuted by the Justice Department. He said this authority was not delegated to the FCC.

tensive study of lightning storms there.

A tremendous amount of data on many natural storms is still needed to evaluate effectively the scientific results of dry-ice seeding, he said.

Forest Service records for the area show an average of 1100 forest fires a year are caused there by lightning, or about 75 per cent of all forest fires recorded each year. A high total of 3113 lightning-caused fires were recorded there in 1940, about 1500 of which occurred within a 10-day period.

Dr. Schaefer said he originally become interested in locating his research at the Priest River Forest Station when he learned that three "breeding" places for incipient thunderstorms existed there. Because of local topographical features, he said, these three locations frequently cause highly active, towering cumulus clouds, which in turn grow into thunderstorms.

Recommending dry-ice seeding experimentation there, the G. E. scientist said he was confident a method could be developed "for completely modifying the type of cumulus clouds which produce lightning, hail, severe 'cloudbursts,' and destructive winds."

Questions for Research

"Whether this method is practical and economic and feasible are questions which will only be answered by those research people who are willing to conduct careful experiments but do so with enthusiasm and imagination," he declared.

Dry-ice seeding of clouds consists of strewing pellets in those clouds from airplanes. Under special conditions of temperature and cloud composition, the chemical is supposed to start precipitation and a chain reaction in the cloud, which continues to cause rain until the cloud has been dissipated.

The Forest Service has not been unmindful of the possibilities, and only recently directed its newly formed division of fire research "to take full advantage for fire-fighting of recent scientific developments." Among measures included as "deserving intensive research" were the work of scientists in tracing lightning storms through radar and "the use of dry ice to produce rain and to control lightning discharges."

In the Priest River Forest Experiment Station study conducted by Dr. Schaefer, the scientist reported he set up special instrumentation to record automatically all lightning strikes in the general area. In one small storm alone, he said, 77 lightning strikes were recorded within 10 miles of the station. Only 11 fires were caused, however, because the forests were abnormally wet at the time, he reported.

Dr. Schaefer said he also took time-lapse movies at the rate of one frame every 2½ seconds of the development of cumulus clouds into thunderstorms. Projected on a screen at the rate of 16 frames a second, the movies show 40 minutes of cloud development in about a minute. The method, he said, offers a convenient means for study and analysis of the beginning of a storm.

interviewed the distraught parents, said he could assign no motive for the abduction. He said the couple are "not wealthy" and told him they didn't "have an enemy in the world."

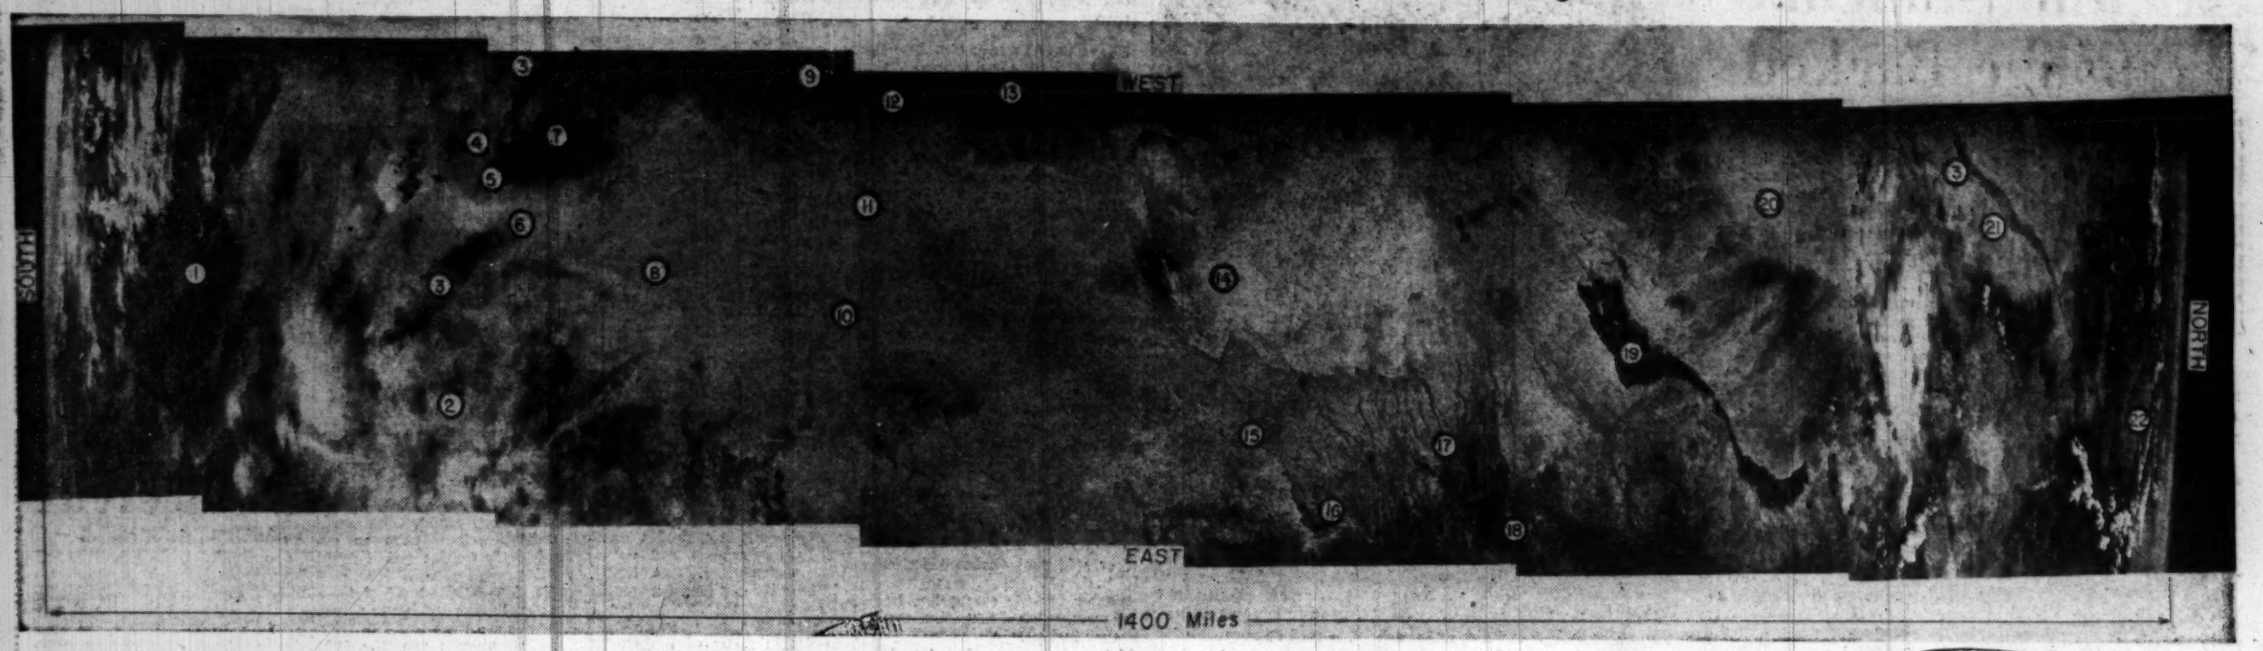
Someday You May See This From the Window of a Rocket Plane . . .



70-Mile Downward Look—

An Aerobee rocket—equipped with a sequence camera to make this composite picture—rose 70 miles above the earth to get this view. It was launched from the White Sands Proving Grounds 76 minutes after the V-2 missile which made the composite on Page 1. Identified on this 1400-mile expanse of earth are Mexico (1); Texas (2); Rio Grande River (3); Cuidad Juarez, Mexico, (4); El Paso, Tex. (5); Biggs Field Army Air Base (6); Franklin Mountains (7); Southern Pacific Railroad, with highway alongside (8); Organ Mountains (9); Tularosa Basin (10); V-2 and Aerobee launching sites (11); Base Headquarters, White Sands Proving Grounds (12); San Andres Mountains (13); White Sands National Monument area (14); Alamogordo Army Airfield (15); Alamogordo, N. Mex. (16); Tularosa, N. Mex. (17); Sacramento Mountains (18); Malpais or ancient lava beds (19); test site for first atomic bomb (20); Albuquerque, N. Mex. (21); areas of Wyoming (22). Note that the Rio Grande is indicated three places

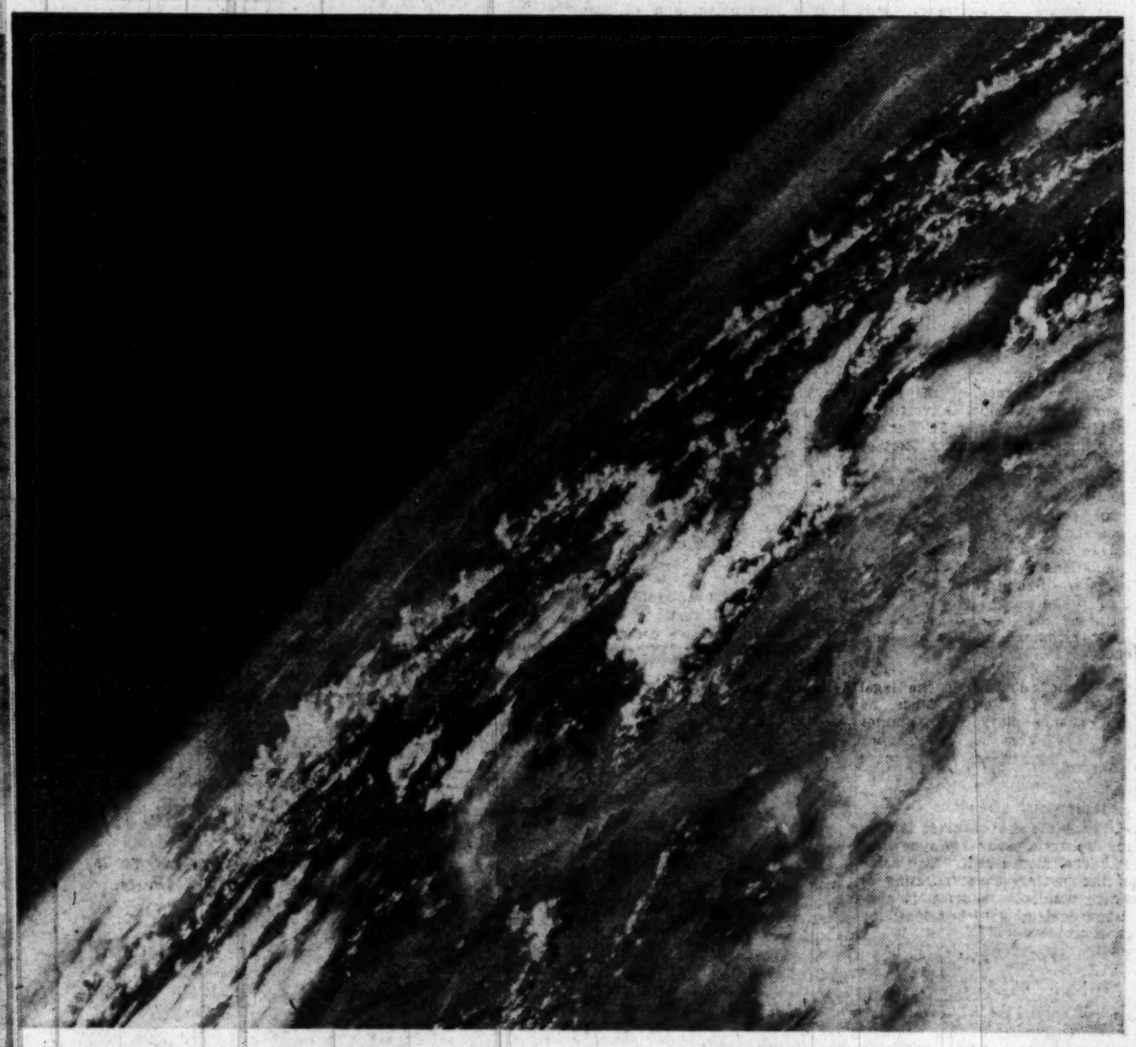
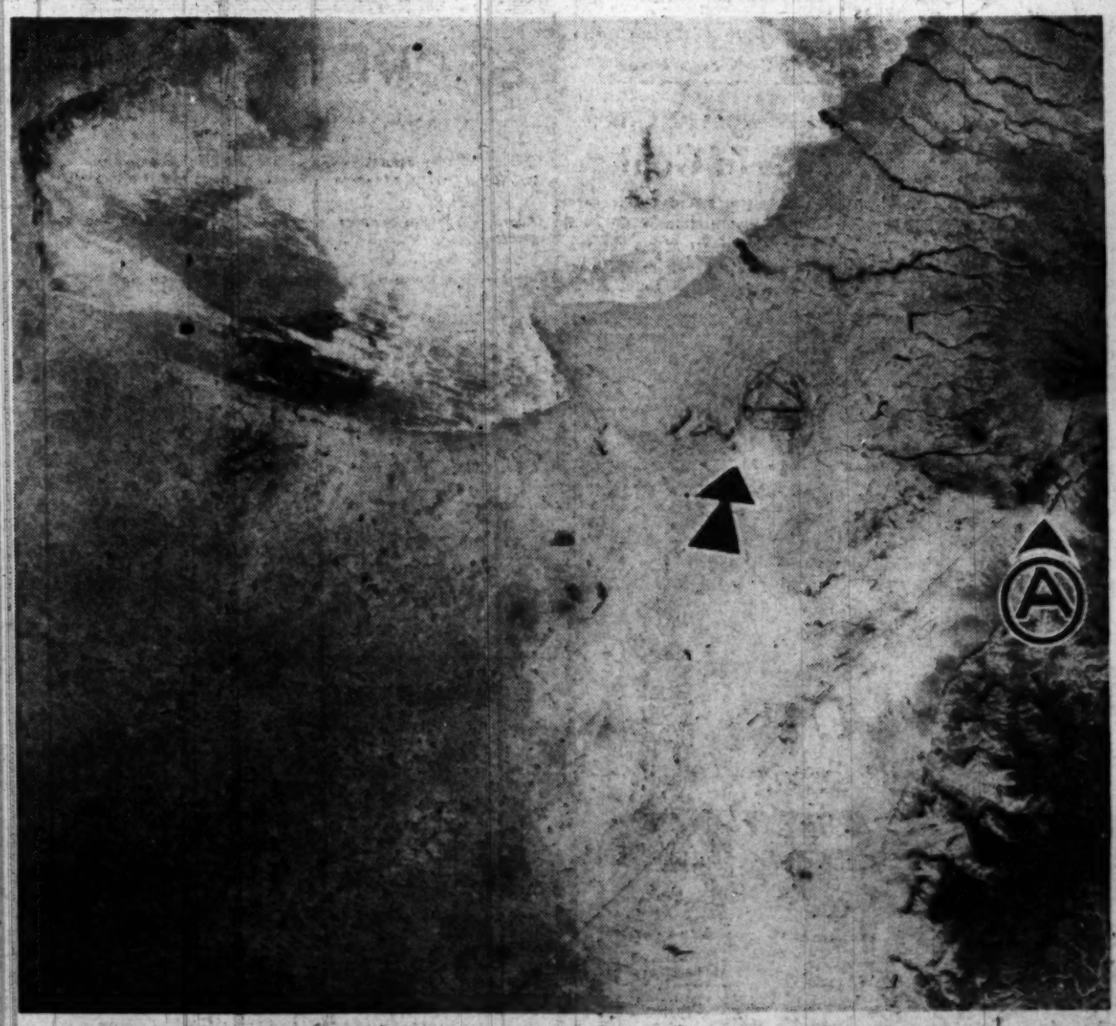
Rocketing Over the Rio

This is how the Rio Grande River and its irrigated valley looked from an altitude of 55 miles. This picture was made by the rocket-borne camera as the rocket descended. The river snakes through a patchwork of farms



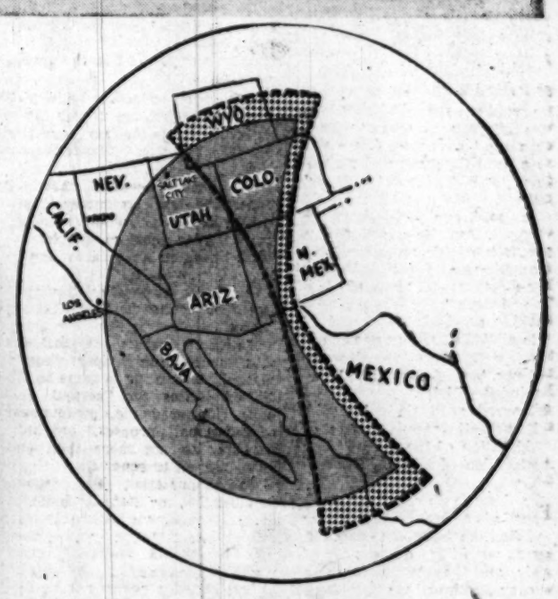
Earth's Curvature—

Christopher Columbus would have liked to see this—a picture of the earth from 57 miles up plainly showing the curvature of the earth and the ground haze above it. This "shot" is part of sequence (top) making up the 1400 composite of Wyoming to Mexico



White Sands Below—

A practically vertical "shot" of White Sands, N. Mex., was made by the Aerobee to complete part of the composite photo (top). Visible is the Alamogordo Army Air Field (arrow), with its crossing runways; and the City of Alamogordo, N. Mex. (A). The Southern Pacific Railroad is like a pencil line over the earth's surface and piercing the city



Area Photographed—

Map indicates two areas photographed by rocket-borne cameras. The larger area, within solid line, shows land encompassed by the pictures made from V-2 rocket and reproduced on Page 1. The smaller area, within the broken line, was that covered by the Aerobee-borne camera and pictured in the composite picture (top)

Rocket Cameras Photograph Vast Area From 60 Miles Up

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

American scientists with rocket-borne cameras have speed-photographed a 2700-mile stretch of North America encompassing a land area of some 800,000 square miles.

The pictures, taken at 70 and 60-mile trajectory peaks of a Navy liquid-fueled Aerobee and a German V-2 rocket, show up not only the earth's curvature, but its mountains, rivers, railroads, highways, airfields, towns and cities.

The Aerobee camera film sequences, pieced together into photographic mosaics, cover terrain stretching from central Wyoming to deep into Mexico, a horizon sweep 1400 miles in length. Total land area covered in the even larger photo mosaic of film from the V-2 was approximately 800,000 square miles, with the 2700-mile horizon sweep.

Shot From White Sands

The photographs, released for publication yesterday by the Navy Department, were obtained this summer from the two rockets, launched within 76 minutes of each other at the White Sands Proving Grounds, Las Cruces, N. Mex.

The camera-equipped Aerobee reached an altitude of approximately 70 miles, while the use of the larger V-2 stopped at slightly more than 60 miles above the ground, guided missile scientists said. Each took more than 200 photographs at 1½-second intervals from take-off to start of descent, even during peak travel speeds of approximately 2700 miles an hour.

At the Johns Hopkins AP lab, Clyde T. Holliday of 1232 Blair Mill rd., Silver Spring, Md., inspects two of the cameras used in filming the earth from rockets. Camera at left was used in the V-2 (picture on page 1), while the one at right was in the Aerobee. In all, three K25 aircraft cameras were used and all came through intact

Cameras were installed in the rockets by technicians of the Applied Physics Laboratory of Johns Hopkins University, in Silver Spring, Md., as part of its continuing research program under contract with the Navy Bureau of Ordnance. Clyde T. Holliday of 1232 Blair Mill rd., Silver Spring, member of APL's high altitude research group, was in charge of the rocket photography project.

Scientific objectives, the Navy said, were to study missile orientation to further cosmic ray research, to obtain meteorological information, and to investigate the use of rockets in aerial photographic reconnaissance.

Three Cameras Used

The Aerobee carried two cameras mounted in its nose (instrumentation head) while the V-2 carried one.

When the Aerobee had descended to about 30 miles above the earth an explosive charge fired by ground-control radio blew off the rocket's tail section to upset its plunge guidance and prevent the main body and nose from breaking up into small pieces in descending contact with the earth's atmosphere.

Even then, teams from the White Plains Proving Grounds had to search the desert for 19 days to find the instrumentation head and its cameras. Exposure to the sun and desert heat caused some loss in color balance of exposures made by the color camera, but the black-and-white film was unharmed. The cameras were salvageable, though battered.

The nose section of the V-2 was exploded at 24 miles from the earth. Its camera fell free, virtually undamaged, and was found 3½ days later with the film in excellent condition.

Much of the meteorological and missile guidance data sought was transmitted to recording stations on the ground by a telemetering system of electronic instruments operating in the rockets while they were in flight, the Navy said.

Dewey Gets Ready For Another Swing

Kentucky Speech

Record Vote Appeal Made By Barkley

Ashland, Ky., Oct. 19 (AP).—In his first home-State speech of the 1948 campaign, Senator Alben W. Barkley urged Kentuckians tonight to cast a record vote next month "to prevent a return to Republican shortsightedness."

Speaking to an estimated 400 persons in the high school auditorium here, the Democratic vice-presidential nominee said voter apathy on November 2 would return the country to "economic disaster, hopelessness and despair."

The entire world, Barkley said, is watching the United States to see if the democracy it boasts still is working. "Hundreds of millions of people abroad," he said, "are being denied the right to vote by a brutal totalitarianism."

Asks Record Turnout

He said a record turnout of voters this year will mean "we will have a good government, we will have a good Congress and we will have a good President."

Only by their past records, Barkley said, can political parties be judged. And he added that a comparison of the records of the Democratic and Republican Parties is like a comparison "between daylight and dark."

Barkley assailed the record of the Republican Party as one of unemployment, farm foreclosures, food lines, bank failures and "narrow-minded policies."

Compared with that, he said, the Democratic record is one of "consideration of the people" and of restoration of faith in Government.

"We deserve to win," he said, "because of our record; because we have lifted the American people in 16 years out of the deepest pit of despair and hopelessness which they ever faced, and we now stand on the firmest foundation of economic stability ever enjoyed by the American people."

Barkley drove here from Huntington, W. Va., and left immediately after his 30-minute talk for another rally in that city, in which he renewed his plea for a heavy vote.

At Huntington he cited the record of the Democratic Party in behalf of workingmen and farmers.

Barkley urged West Virginians to elect Matthew M. Neely, former Governor, to the United States Senate over GOP Nominee Chapman Revercomb, and to send a full set of Democrats to the House.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 19 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey took a rest from active campaigning today.

He worked on State business, and on speeches he will make Wednesday and Thursday nights in New York.

The Republican candidate for President plans to leave tomorrow afternoon.

In the evening he will speak at the Herald-Tribune Forum. The next night he will make an address at a dinner honoring Alfred E. Smith.

It has not been decided how he will spend Friday and Saturday. The Governor expected to discuss weekend plans tonight by telephone with his campaign manager, Herbert Brownell.

Dewey, who returned last night from a 4500-mile campaign trip, now is scheduled to leave Albany Monday for a major address in Chicago Tuesday night. But pressure is being brought to advance his departure a day to get in a speech at Detroit.

And West Virginia Republicans still are pressing for a Dewey visit there in support of Senator Chapman Revercomb, who is facing stiff Democratic opposition in his race for reelection.

Dewey is understood to be irked at Revercomb because of the latter's refusal to go along on a revision of the displaced persons law during the August special session of Congress. Whether that will stand in the way of a Dewey plug to help keep the Senate under GOP control is something the New Yorker has been keeping to himself.

The Dewey camp studied with satisfaction official New York State registration figures for the November 2 election. They showed total registration of 7,043,473 voters—169,423 fewer than in 1944—but in 57 up-State and Long Island counties normally Republican the total was 3,730,053, or 73,435 more than four years ago. In normally Democratic New York City, the registration for the five counties was 3,313,520, or 242,857 under 1944.

Warren Takes 'Holiday' As Legion Delegate

Miami, Fla., Oct. 19 (AP).—Gov. Earl Warren of California enjoyed the American Legion convention today "merely as a delegate."

However, he was received more warmly than most delegates when he attended an informal social gathering at the California delegation's Miami Beach headquarters.

Fellow Californians swarmed around to shake hands and slap him on the back.

He said the visit was "a kind of holiday" and planned no press conferences or political talks.

He is scheduled to speak briefly Wednesday before the Legion's general assembly.

Warren plans to leave Miami at 8 a.m. (EST) Thursday on his private plane for Sacramento. He is scheduled to stop for speeches at Fort Worth, Tex., and Junction City, Colo.

Fire Marshall, Wallace Urges

Reading, Pa., Oct. 19 (AP).—Henry Wallace said tonight that if President Truman had "any respect for the office he holds" he would fire Gen. George C. Marshall as Secretary of State.

"I tell you," Wallace said, "that Harry S. Truman has abdicated. . . . He still sleeps in the White House, and that's about all."

Wallace's attack on Marshall was the strongest in months of campaigning for the Presidency on the Progressive Party ticket. The two men formerly were quite friendly, and until recently Wallace had sent Marshall gifts of products from his farm.

But tonight Wallace said Marshall had given Mr. Truman a "contemptuous brushoff" in connection with the Truman plan—now abandoned—to send Chief Justice Vinson to Moscow for negotiations.

Wallace said he had always been under the impression that responsibility for foreign policy rests with the President, yet when Marshall returned from Paris recently, "he spent most of his time not with Harry Truman, but with (Secretary of Defense James) Forrestal (Undersecretary of State Robert) Lovett and the rest of the generals and bankers who really run our Government today—and run it without any mandate from the American people."

Thurmond Hits 3 Parties' Stand

Macon, Ga., Oct. 19 (AP).—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond said tonight the Democratic, Republican and Progressive Parties are committed to banish home rule.

On the other hand, he asserted the objective of the States' Rights Democrats is "to restore the Democratic Party to its historic function, which is to stand as a bulwark for States' rights and for local self-government."

Bidding for Georgia's 12 uncertain electoral votes, the States' Rights presidential candidate said in an address prepared for delivery that "a man's liberties in the country depend utterly and completely on local self-government."

"If we destroy the rights of States," he continued, "we give up the liberties of local self-government, and open our doors to the inroads of the Communists, so that their theories of the total state may gobble us up."

Thurmond characterized the Nation's political leaders as a "bunch of political pygmies, who are so small that they cannot see the vast, towering edifice of constitutional government."

Truman Hits Dixiecrats, GOP

by the powerful man and the greedy Wall Street interests that want cheap labor and cheap farm products. Republicanism puts the almighty dollar first and is not above using a little tidelands oil money to grease the way to power."

Then Mr. Truman appealed directly to the Southern members of his own party who are in open rebellion over his civil rights program.

"Today big-money Republicanism is on the march," he said in measured accents, "and to beat it we've all got to stand together. That's where we Democrats belong—together—shoulder to shoulder . . .

"We all belong together. I believe in loyalty as the great force in politics—the loyalty of free men and women, freely given and honorably received.

"But above all treasure the basic principle of democracy itself—the right to disagree among ourselves without letting differences of opinion lead us into temptation to betray our own best interests."

Capitol Speech Coolly Received

The reception given the President by his farm audience was many degrees warmer than the one he received from Raleigh at large this morning. His speech on the capitol grounds was coolly received and the procession to the capitol drew a moderate crowd which was friendly but not enthusiastic. There were few violations of traditional Southern hospitality. Here and there among the crowd a small Confederate flag waved and one man was heard to shout: "We are for the States Rights ticket! We're for Thurmond!"

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina is States Rights Party candidate for President, supported by Southern Democrats who split with Mr. Truman on the civil rights issue.

But at the fairgrounds this afternoon, the Chief Executive told his audience exactly what they wanted to hear and in words they understood. They rewarded him with whoops of delight.

Describing himself as "fighting mad," Mr. Truman lit into the Republican depression record and the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress for curtailing soil conservation, rural electrification, the Commodity Credit Corporation and the reciprocal trade agreement. He said the Congress threatened a "death tax" on farm cooperatives and "tried to kill the farm tenant purchase program."

"In the 1920s," Mr. Truman said, "the Republican Party could not fight depression. It was incapable of bold action for the people. The big business owners of that dismal party said there was nothing to do but 'ride it out.' You did—in Hoover carts.

"Today, the Republican Party stands convicted of being incapable of fighting inflation. Some of its present leaders have tried to put the blame for inflation on farm prices."

Mr. Truman denied that prices of finished industrial products were influenced by prices paid the farmer.

"Now wheat prices have fallen a dollar a bushel," he said, "but the price of bread has not come down a cent.

"It's the same with cotton. Nobody can blame the cost of a shirt on the cotton that's in it.

"The price of tobacco is infinitemimal in the cost of cigarettes."

The President let fly another roundhouse swing at GOP Candidate Thomas E. Dewey's pleas for "unity." Speaking of the Republican leadership of the Eightieth Congress, he said: "They have given us a sharp warning of what the Republican Party stands for today. And their record shows that the Republican Party stands for the same thing today that it did under Herbert Hoover.

"That is the record on which the Republican presidential candidate 'wants us to be unified.' Governor Dewey, said Mr. Truman, has "indorsed the record of the Eightieth Congress. He says he is proud of the Eightieth Congress."

The President concluded this afternoon's speech with a warning to dissident Democrats:

"They (the Republicans) think they can fool enough of the people this time to capture the election by wasted Democratic votes.

"I don't think you want to take another chance on the Hoover brand of Republicanism."

This morning Mr. Truman's speech was the highlight of ceremonies at which a monument was unveiled to three native North Carolinians who became Presidents of the United States. They were Andrew Jackson, James K. Polk and Andrew Johnson.

All three, the President said, "held the office of President in time of trouble." Jackson's crisis, he said, was the first threat of Southern secession; Polk's was the Mexican War, and Johnson's "the mass hysteria" after the Civil War.

In each case the implication of coincidence with Mr. Truman's own situation was apparent. Jackson, he said, told his own people they were wrong in the Nullification issue. Polk's efforts to negotiate a generous peace were balked by the House of Representatives which tacked the Wilmot Proviso onto bill appropriating funds for payment to Mexico. And Johnson defended "the principle that the Constitution of the United States and not the desire of angry men is the supreme law of the land."

President Returns From Southern Trip

President Truman landed at National Airport at 5:30 p. m. yesterday after a two-day flying trip into the South.

He and his party went immediately to the White House, where he said he would dig into the work on his desk and polish up his speech to be delivered Saturday at Pittsburgh.

U. S. Workers Accused of Election Work

By The Associated Press

The House Committee on Publicity and Propaganda disclosed yesterday that it has an investigator looking into charges that Government workers are campaigning for the Democratic senatorial candidate in New Mexico.

Frank T. Bow, committee counsel, said numerous complaints have been received that Government employes have been briefed here and sent into New Mexico to work in behalf of former Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson.

Charges also have been received, Bow said, that Government workers from neighboring States also are being sent into New Mexico to spread the word that funds for soil conservation, Indian affairs, control of hoof-and-mouth disease, and the like will be cut off if a Republican is elected.

May Invoke Hatch Act

The Republican senatorial candidate in New Mexico is Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War under former President Hoover.

Bow said that Richard Hodson of Deming, N. Mex., former investigator for the committee, has been commissioned to make the on-the-spot inquiry.

If the charges are found to be true, Bow said, recommendations will be made for prosecutions under the Hatch Antipolities Act.

Chairman Harness (R., Ind.) earlier yesterday asked that the General Accounting Office refuse payment of expenses for what Harness described as a "political trip" by Secretary of Interior Krug to the West Coast.

Harness, as chairman of a subcommittee in another letter, asked the Civil Service Commission to investigate the trip by Krug and other department officials and take "appropriate action."

Kerr's Spending Questioned

Krug and several department aides left last month on what Krug described as his annual inspection tour of Western projects. The six-week trip called for stops at reclamation, Indian and other Government projects, in South Dakota, Wyoming, Montana, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, California, New Mexico and Oklahoma. The party is due back here October 26.

Meanwhile Senate investigators said yesterday they have gathered data indicating that former Gov. Robert S. Kerr exceeded Oklahoma's spending limit of $3000 in the Democratic senatorial primary.

The former Governor and Representative Ross Rizley are contesting for the seat held by the retiring Senator Moore (Republican).

Evenly Divided Senate Would Make History; Warren as Vice President Would Be Busy

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The intriguing possibility of an evenly divided Senate, something that has never happened in our history, yesterday sent parliamentarians thumbing through Senate rules and precedents.

What would happen if Gov. Thomas E. Dewey is elected President, as now seems likely, but has a 48-to-48, absolutely tied, Senate on his hands?

Two Answers Provided

Here are two of the answers the parliamentarians came up with:

1. Republicans would still retain nominal majority control of the Senate—Gov. Earl Warren's tie-breaking Vice Presidential vote wouldn't be needed or cast to actually organize the Senate for the GOP.

2. When the Senate actually got around to legislating, however, Governor Warren would be one of the first Vice Presidents in history to wear pants in his own right. In every tie count on a bill or amendment, and there would be a lot of them, his would be the deciding vote.

With the Senate now divided 51 to 45, in favor of the GOP, Democrats need pick up only three seats to produce a politically tied Senate. But that wouldn't be enough to actually organize the Senate.

GOP Now in Control

Reason is that Republicans already have control of the Senate and it takes more than a tie vote to unhorse them. If the Democrats tried to, and the vote on the question was 48 to 48, there would be no reason for Warren to vote. Republicans would simply hold what they have.

Nor could the vice president vote if the Democrats established marginal control of the Senate by picking up four seats instead of three. That would give the Democrats 49 to 47 organizing control of the Senate.

Warren couldn't do a thing about it in that case, either, except announce the result from the chair. Vice Presidents can only vote in case of a tie. Then they have an option. They can vote or not, as they please.

But with a politically tied Senate, or one almost evenly divided, Warren would emerge as a sort of ninety-seventh Senator.

Warren May Be Busy

Assuming the Senate votes party-wise on all bills, which in actual fact it seldom does, Warren in addition to presiding over the Senate would be called on to vote nearly every day.

Even without straight party voting there would be enough tied senatorial roll calls to lift Governor Warren from the Throttle-bottom role he detests.

With the "full partnership" promised him in administrative matters by Governor Dewey he may well be the Nation's busiest Vice President in fact.

The prospect of a politically tied Senate isn't nearly as remote as it sounds. Despite indications of a Dewey presidential sweep, Democrats are claiming they will pick up six or seven Senate seats. Republicans claim they will at least hold their present 51 to 45 Senate margin. Split the difference in claims and you have—a tied Senate.

Close Divisions in Past

Actually, it isn't nearly that simple. Complex local cross currents in each State may turn up quite a different figure. But the mathematical odds in favor of a Senate gain are concededly with the Democrats. Unless the experts are mistaken it will be an extremely close Senate and it could hit a historical jackpot—the perfect tie. The Senate has had many approximate ties, but never a true one politically.

Nearly 60 years ago, the 1881 Senate divided this way in the closest thing to it: Republicans 37, Democrats 37, other parties 2.

Other close divisions:

1919 Senate—48 Republicans, 47 Democrats and 1 other party. (This same division was repeated in 1927 and 1931.)

What happened in those other approximate ties adds up to bad news for Governor Dewey and the country at large. In nearly every case, jockeying for control in a closely divided Senate, or between a President of one party and a Senate of another, boiled down to one word: Stalemate.

Lucas Sees Democrats Controlling Senate

By the United Press

Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) claimed yesterday the Democrats will win control of the United States Senate in the November election by picking up seven additional seats and possibly 10.

Lucas, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, predicted his party would wrest seats from the frankly worried Republicans in Minnesota, Kentucky, Oklahoma, West Virginia, Wyoming, Illinois and Iowa. He said the Democrats have "a better than even" chance to capture seats in Idaho, Delaware and Michigan.

Republican leaders, supremely confident that they will capture the White House, are making no secret of their anxiety over the senatorial outlook. A net loss of four seats would switch control of the chamber to the Democrats.

Democrat, Official Confident

George M. Harrison, head of the Democratic National Committee's labor division, said in a final pre-election appraisal that the Democrats are already assured of winning at least four Senate seats now held by Republicans.

He listed the States as Minnesota, Oklahoma, West Virginia and Wyoming. He said the Democrats are also certain of retaining their present seats from Montana, Colorado, Rhode Island and Tennessee.

He said the Democrats have the best chance of picking up a fiftieth seat by winning Iowa from the Republicans and by hanging on to New Mexico. Best bets for other seats, he said, are GOP-held places in Idaho, Delaware, Massachusetts, Illinois, Michigan and New Jersey.

Dixiecrats Urging Maryland Write-In

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—The States Rights Democrats have shifted their Maryland presidential campaign plans.

They are urging their supporters simply to write in "Thurmond and Wright" on the ballot or voting machine, and have scrapped a list of eight electors for the ticket.

Actually, Marylanders who do that will be voting for J. Strom Thurmond and Fielding Wright as presidential electors—and not as candidates for President and Vice President.

Organized Too Late

The States Righters organized their party too late to qualify for a place on the Maryland ballot this November.

At first, State party leaders planned to have the names of an electoral slate of eight printed on gummed paper for distribution among Thurmond supporters. These could have been pasted to the write-in space of the ballot or voting machine and would have counted as a vote.

After a conference with Attorney General Hall Hammond yesterday, E. Steuart Vaughan, State's Rights campaign manager in Maryland, announced the change in strategy.

He explained that, under Maryland law, presidential electors do not have to be residents of the State.

Difference of Opinion

Vaughan contended that if Thurmond and Wright won more votes than any other electoral college list, they could choose six other associate electors so that the entire eight electoral college votes to which Maryland is entitled would be cast for the States' Rights ticket.

Hammond disagreed with this reasoning, and said it was his informal opinion that if the Thurmond-Wright write-in topped the list, the party would be entitled to just two electoral college votes. The other six electors probably would be chosen from the next highest slate, he said. Hammond emphasized he was not making a formal ruling on the question.

Markey Declares Maryland Veterans Will Vote for Republican Ticket

Gen. John D. Markey, chairman of the Veterans' Division of the Maryland Republican State Central Committee, told a rally in Silver Spring last night that State veterans would vote GOP in next month's elections.

"The veterans' principal gripe," he declared, "is that while they were making a great sacrifice on the battle front, Communism was infiltrating into all Government departments at home."

More than 400 persons attended the Montgomery County County rally in the Silver Spring Armory, sponsored by the Dewey-Warren-Beall Club.

Representative Frank Fellows (R., Me.), another speaker, called the Taft-Hartley labor law a piece of legislation "designed to give the man who works a little more dignity," and said it reduced strikes by 50 per cent and had saved labor "millions of dollars."

"President Truman is using it every day," he said, hitting at Mr. Truman's opposition to the law passed over his veto. Fellows called the Dewey-Warren ticket "one of the finest in history."

Representative J. Glenn Beall, running for reelection from Maryland's Sixth District, also spoke.

State Senator Roy Tasco Davis opened the rally, and Brooke Johns, president of the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners, was master of ceremonies.

10 Other Candidates Fight Truman for Presidency

Eleven candidates are seeking the Presidency of the United States in the November 2 election.

However, not all the names will appear on every State ballot because of failure of their party to comply with State election requirements.

The 11 candidates and their parties:

President Harry S. Truman of Missouri, Democrat; Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, Republican; Henry Wallace of New York, Progressive; Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, States' Rights.

Norman Thomas of New York, Socialist; Edward A. Teichert of Pennsylvania, Socialist Labor; Claude A. Watson of California, Prohibition; John G. Scott of New York, Greenback; Gerald L. K. Smith of Michigan, Christian Nationalist Crusade; Farrell Dobbs of New York, Socialist Workers; John Maxwell of Illinois, Vegetarian.

The Gallup Poll

14-Point Guide Shows Voter Sentiment

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 19.—Here is a 14-point guide to national political sentiment as the 1948 presidential campaign enters the final lap.

1. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today has a commanding lead in electoral votes. Institute surveys reported to date show the New York Governor leading in 30 States, President Truman in 13, and Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States Rights nominee, in four with the two major candidates tied in one State.

2. In the most recent survey by the Institute, candidates received the following percentages of the total popular vote, when the voters who are still undecided are eliminated.

Governor Dewey	50%
President Truman	44
Henry A. Wallace	4
Governor Thurmond	2
Others	*

*Less than 1 per cent.

It should be kept in mind that the above figures reflect sentiment as of early October and that surveys now in progress may change today's percentages.

The significance of Dewey's current percentage of the total popular vote can best be grasped by comparing it with that polled by President Roosevelt in recent elections: in 1944 Roosevelt received 53.4 per cent of all votes cast; 54.7 per cent in 1940, and 60.8 per cent in 1936.

3. Republicans have a real fight on their hands to keep control of the Senate and to maintain their present majority in the House of Representatives.

Although the Institute has made no surveys in individual congressional races, and, therefore, is not in a position to forecast their outcome, the reader should remember two pertinent facts in following congressional elections.

The split in the ranks of the Democrats will be a far less important factor in these elections than in the presidential race for the simple reason that the Dixiecrats are supporting regular Democratic candidates and the Progressive Party has entered candidates in fewer than a fourth of all congressional districts.

More people in this country today call themselves Democrats than call themselves Republicans. In a study completed just last week, in which voters were asked: "In politics, as of today, do you consider yourself a Democrat, a Republican, a Progressive or Independent?" the answers of those who say they will vote on November 2 were as follows:

Democrat	44%
Republican	35
Progressive	2
Independent	19

What may have an important bearing on the congressional races is that, in answer to another question, more Democratic voters indicated they are leaving their party to vote for Dewey than indicated their intention to vote for Republican congressional candidates. Offsetting this, at least to some extent, is the tendency of many voters, once they have made up their mind regarding the head of the ticket, to vote a "straight" ballot.

4. Wallace will not carry a single State. In not 1 of the 48 States will he poll more than a small part of the total vote. Despite this, his effect on the Truman candidacy will be considerable, particularly in States where the vote is close, since Wallace draws far greater strength from those who voted Democratic in earlier presidential elections than from those who voted Republican.

Although polls are not infallible, no evidence has come to light yet which would support Wallace's claim of many millions of "hidden votes" for the Progressive Party which polls have somehow failed to uncover. The Wallace vote, according to present evidence, is about 4 per cent of all votes cast. This compares with a vote of 16.7 per cent received by La Follette in 1924 when he ran as the candidate of the Progressive Party. The Wallace vote will actually be much closer to that of Eugene Debs, Socialist candidate, who polled 3.3 per cent of the total vote in the 1920 election—the first after World War I.

5. Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States' Rights nominee, is taking electoral votes from Truman which are ordinarily considered assured for the regular Democratic candidate. The Dixiecrats' ticket leads in 4 of the 13 traditionally Democratic States in the South. These States have a total of 38 electoral votes. The Thurmond candidacy is important in another respect. The votes which he takes away from Truman in two States—Florida and Virginia—make it possible for Dewey to have a chance to carry these States.

6. Based on New York City's registration figures, which have in the past provided a reliable index of national turnout, it is expected that approximately 47 million voters will go to the polls November 2. The lack of interest in this election is best indicated by the fact that only approximately 50 per cent of the potential voters will vote, whereas in earlier presidential elections the proportion was much higher. In 1900, for example, 75 per cent of all potential voters went to the polls.

In a recent survey people who said they do not plan to vote were found to be in favor of Truman by a ratio of 4 to 3. In this sense, the low expected turnout will hurt Democratic chances.

7. Veterans of World War II are definitely not voting as a bloc although they give Wallace a slightly higher percentage of their votes than other voters. Institute figures show veterans giving Dewey 47 per cent, Truman, 43 per cent; Wallace, 7 per cent, and Thurmond, 3 per cent.

8. Similar to the veterans' choices is the present attitude of the approximately nine million young people who have come of voting age since 1944. They give Dewey 47 per cent, Truman 44 per cent, Wallace 7 per cent and Thurmond 2 per cent.

9. While Democratic support in the ranks of organized labor has slumped markedly since 1944, President Truman still is the choice of a majority of labor union members. In 1944 a total of 72 per cent of this group of voters supported Roosevelt, compared with only 55 per cent who say they are for Truman. Wallace gets approximately 7 per cent of the vote of organized labor, which accounts for nearly half of the Democratic loss.

10. One of the major indications pointing to a Republican victory is the large shift in sentiment among big city voters. Four years ago Dewey received only 39 per cent of the major party vote in cities over 500,000 population. As of early October he leads in cities of that size with 47 per cent of the total vote against 41 per cent for Truman, 12 per cent for Wallace and less than 1 per cent for Thurmond.

11. The Nation's independent voters favor the election of Governor Dewey. The present sentiment of these people represents a sharp swing from the Democratic to Republican column, since Roosevelt could always count on the vote of two out of three independent voters. Today this group gives Dewey 55 per cent, Truman 35 per cent, Wallace 8 per cent and Thurmond 2 per cent.

12. In sharp contrast to this swing in metropolitan centers is the relative stability of sentiment in the farm regions where the Republican trend flattened out in 1944. Recent years of prosperity for Midwest farmers have helped the Democrats, and in the farm areas west of the Mississippi they will lose the least ground in 1948.

13. This election once again proves there is little evidence to support the claim of a "petticoat vote." The same proportions of women as men favor Dewey and Warren, and the same holds true for the other national tickets. In European elections, on the other hand, a marked difference has been found between the votes of men and women, particularly in respect to the Communist Parties.

14. Norman Thomas, Socialist Party nominee, runs ahead of all the other minor party candidates. But the combined vote for all minor party nominees, other than Thurmond and Wallace, is less than 1 per cent of the total popular vote.

Control Of NCHA Rents

There is good reason, in our opinion, for the Department of Justice to carry to the Supreme Court the decision of the United States Court of Appeals to the effect that governmental housing agencies in Washington are subject to the District's Emergency Rent Control Act. Rent control was put into effect here as a wartime measure for the purpose of curbing "profiteering and other speculative and manipulative practices by some owners of housing accommodations." It seems improbable that Congress ever intended to bring under the act public housing agencies which indulge in none of those practices and which, indeed, make no profits. If the law as written requires that result, it was probably an oversight on the part of Congress.

The case which went up to the Court of Appeals was that of a Navy Department machinist whose rent was raised from $38.20 to $43. The increase was made necessary because of additional costs incurred by the National Capital Housing Authority in supplying gas to the Bellevue project when that project was taken over from the Navy. NCHA had the alternative of absorbing the additional cost and thus subsidizing the tenants or passing the additional expense on to them. Since this war housing was rented on a no-profit basis in the first place, the only reasonable course that could be taken was to add the additional expense to rental bills. It is inconceivable to us that Congress intended to freeze rents of this character, or to place nonprofit governmental housing in the same category as commercial housing.

Further examination of the law is especially important because of NCHA'S policy of permitting tenants in its low-rental housing projects to remain even when their incomes have substantially increased so long as there is no decent housing available to them at rentals they can afford to pay. The housing authority has tried to influence such tenants to move, and in 86 cases it has succeeded. But 334 "overincome" families remain. A year and a half ago NCHA increased the rents of these tenants to a level comparable with the rents which private owners are permitted to charge for similar accommodations, as determined by the rent control administrator. The alternatives to this course would have been heavy subsidization of families fully able to pay commercial rents or their eviction. Eviction would have meant sending these families back to the slums. If public housing is to be intelligently operated in a period of emergency, the authority must have leeway for adjustment of its rentals to changed conditions within the limits of basic public housing policy. Perhaps the Supreme Court will be able to find such flexibility in the Rent Control Act. If not, an amendment by Congress may be necessary to avoid forcing the NCHA into the adoption of absurd policies.

Aid To China

Most of the attention and emphasis in the United States foreign aid program has been concentrated on Europe, and correctly so. It is in Europe that communism's active threat to economic stability is most imminent, and the Administration properly resisted attempts to divert a large part of the outflow of dollars to China. But a certain amount of assistance, with correspondingly less publicity, has been offered to China. Mr. Roger Lapham, administrator of the China Aid Program, reported to the President on its status Sunday and gave some further details to the press on Monday.

The first-year appropriation for aid to China provided 275 million dollars in economic aid and 125 million dollars for assistance. Expenditure of the economic funds has been planned and some authorizations already made. The ECA's first quarterly report shows that up to last June 30 authorized aid to China was wholly in cereals, cotton, petroleum and fertilizer—predominantly relief supplies. And the amount as of that date was $36,500,000. In a nation of 400 million people this is pretty small potatoes (or rice, if you will). And it has little if anything to do with long-range rehabilitation and reconstruction.

However, a number of reconstruction projects have been blueprinted to the amount of 70 million dollars of the first-year appropriation. In addition, Mr. Lapham suggested that the United States should be thinking, in China as in Europe, in terms of recurring annual expenditures. He thought 400 million dollars a year would not be enough. With the logic of this evaluation of aid we do not quarrel; China is an enormous country whose economy is completely out of whack and whose strength is continually sapped by civil war. Throwing in what amounts to a few dollars at a time can have little permanent effect. Even half a billion a year for several years could no more than begin to solve China's desperate difficulties. And such aid would not be fully effective without cooperation from the Chinese government in undertaking basic reforms, a sort of cooperation that has been conspicuously slight thus far.

The Chinese government has obligated itself, as a condition of receiving aid from the United States, to demonstrate "cooperation and self-help." We think more pressure of the kind that finally got the European recipient nations together should be applied to China before anyone starts talking of upping the amount of assistance the Chinese may expect from the United States.

Results In Greece

The statement issued by Ambassador Henry F. Grady in Athens last Saturday, even more than Secretary Marshall's hurried visit there, points up the disappointing results attained so far in "cleaning up" the Greek situation. In the form of answers to a number of written questions posed by American correspondents in Athens, Mr. Grady acknowledged that all is far from well. There are more guerillas fighting in Greece now than there were when American aid started; cooperation received from the Greek government is not as extensive or as effective as it should be; there has been too much optimism on the success of military operations both in Greece and in the United States.

Mr. Grady said he did not believe the situation in Greece is "acutely worse," an implicit admission that it is, at any rate, not better. And by refusing to comment on one query he as much as admitted its accuracy. The question was whether the Greek government, knowing that the United States cannot afford failure in Greece, is not engaging in a form of international blackmail—not making a full military effort unless it gets more aid than it is now receiving.

Against these disturbing admissions must be balanced the real achievements both of the Greek military effort and of the American economic mission. The Greek army is well equipped, organized and officered. It has displayed considerable fighting ability and much improved morale, particularly in the Grammos offensive. The fact that additional guerilla forces, reformed across the border, have slipped back to make more trouble is a consequence of the strategic condition rather than a fault of the army. Having to defend a long border thinly is always a disadvantageous task.

On the economic side, roads and railroads have been reconstructed, homes rebuilt, harbors cleared, and the damaging disparity between the luxury life enjoyed by a few and the poverty of the many narrowed from both ends. It is the estimate of the State Department that the stability and inward strength of the government have increased more than the threat of the guerillas, though this seems somewhat at variance with the inference drawn from Mr. Grady's belief that the situation is not "acutely worse."

Both the good and the bad in these developments must be taken together. We should beware of the Greeks asking more gifts just for the sake of getting as much out of us as possible. But we cannot and should not overlook the fact that, however disappointing, our aid to Greece has by no means been a failure. Indeed, we should probably not now be in the position to suffer disappointment had both the Greeks and our own officials, from Secretary Marshall down, talked too much and too soon about success that had not yet materialized.

German Editors

In the grand tradition of the American tourist, 15 editors and publishers from the western zones of Germany spent last weekend in Washington, sightseeing, attending conferences with Government officials and in general sizing up the Capital of American democracy. The visitors evidenced that they were astute observers, and their experience should be valuable. Many of these journalists are persons who suffered for their convictions in Hitler Germany. They have a difficult task in their homeland—that of reconstituting faith in a free press among people whose longtime source was Dr. Goebbels—and their efforts deserve the sincere interest and help of this country.

Their visit itself is an ambitious experiment, made possible by the Rockefeller Foundation. They have spent six weeks attending a seminar of the American Press Institute at Columbia University in New York. Before they return to Germany they will have an additional two weeks in which to visit areas of the United States away from the Eastern seaboard. During their stay here they have had a chance to examine not only American newspaper techniques but also the structure of American institutions and the relation of the press to Government.

Undoubtedly their visit has been instructive in ideas as well as methods. It has also been profitable for those Americans who learned something about conditions in Germany, including the obstacles encountered by publications trying to remain independent and unsubsidized. Unfortunately, however, there has been some tendency among representatives of the American press to place their contacts with the German journalists principally in a master-pupil relationship. Regardless of the earned attributes of the American press, there is an irritating smugness about the assumption that it is the standard of comparison for the world. A free press has flourished in many countries, including pre-Hitler Germany. We have things to learn as well as things to teach, and the part of wisdom is to forgo bragging in favor of a genuine exchange of ideas.

Back On The Beam

President Truman's address to the American Legion was obviously his substitute for the mission to Moscow that he had recently planned for Chief Justice Vinson. In it he has expressed the American objectives and policies that he wished the Chief Justice to explain to Marshal Stalin. The President wants the whole world to know that the United States does not have a chip on its shoulder, that the people of this country despise war, and that all our hopes for the future are based on the peaceful settlement of whatever international disputes may arise. Undoubtedly the President expressed the sentiment of an overwhelming majority of the American people.

Coupled with this earnest desire for peace is a firm determination to uphold freedom, to protect our rights and to resist any aggression that threatens the peace of the world. "We will never be a party," the President said, "to the kind of compromise which the world sums up in the disgraced name of Munich." Appeasement of aggression holds no hope of peace. The present response to threats and coercion is to strengthen the forces that can resist aggression and to tighten the bonds that hold democratic, peace-loving peoples together. All this has been often repeated, yet it is good to have the President say it once more because of the critical state of world affairs.

President Truman's grave mistake of two weeks ago lay in the fact that no one, least of all the Russians, would have understood a mission to Moscow to say what he has said in Miami. Because of the complaint against Russia brought in the Security Council by the United States, Great Britain and France, an emissary going from Washington to the Soviet capital would have been looked upon as a messenger of appeasement regardless of what his instructions might have been. "The great need today," Mr. Truman told the Legion, "is for action to strengthen the United Nations in dealing with the disputes which now challenge its authority . . ." The need for such action was no less acute two weeks ago when the President proposed a course that would have cut the ground from beneath the U. N.

The fact that the President undertook to defend his abandoned proposal leaves a question as to whether he appreciates the difference between restating the American position in this country and sending a mission to Moscow. Nevertheless, his closing of the door to appeasement along with his repudiation of any warlike spirit is a positive contribution to world stability that transcends its political importance.

Love Drippers

Being a people who do things by extremes, we are not unlikely in our present swing away from the do-it-by-the-book school of child rearing to indulge in a field day of sentimentality in the nursery. Child experts are now debating the recent warning of Dr. C. C. Burlingame, chief psychiatrist and president of the Hartford Institute of Living, who declared that the "love starvation" school, now in the ascendant, would have us "dripping love all over the place until the child falls and fractures his future." He was referring to exaggerations that might grow out of today's emphasis on giving a child security through expressed love and affection. This school of child rearing advises parents to pick up babies when they cry, fondle them—even rock them—and to surround children with constant evidence of affection.

Some child experts recognize that this approach has its pitfalls, as did the old rigid spinach and cod liver oil schedule. Weak, selfish, oversentimental parents can use it as an excuse to indulge and overprotect their children and to make them pets or toys for their own enjoyment. But that, says Dr. Lawrence K. Frank, director of the Caroline Zachry Institute of Human Development, is not love; rather it is an abuse of love due to a lack of understanding of the child's needs. Dr. Frank, writing in the New York Times Magazine, reemphasizes the need to show affection to children, but if that cannot be done spontaneously then to give them "some assurance that they are wanted and admired."

In such an insecure world as the present, children especially need the assurance that comes from evidence of deep parental love. Yet with the world so menacing they also need to be trained to stand on their own feet, to be strong and resourceful and free from the psychic crippling that comes from overprotection. Parents of today have to draw a fine line between dripping love and making it a deep, steady flow. As always in times of social upheaval theirs is the hardest job of all.

DE NEDERLANDEN

The sun shone bright those long September days
On the New Church; the Palace bells rang out
Their clearest tones over the happy throng
Whose buoyant calls and voices, thousandfold
United into one jubilant song
In streets with flags and bunting: red-white-blue.
It was the feast when Wilhelmina, crowned a queen,
Swore loyalty her people and a righteous reign
And spoke the solemn oath: "So help me God."
Almost a girl she was, of burdens free
But trusted by her people, whose prayers ushered in
A tie never to break, up to the present day.
An era had begun of quiet work, of strife and toil
True to the traditions grown into the past.

Lincoln's Appeal

On October 11 you published a communication from my old friend, David Rankin Barbee, tending to show that the log cabin at Hodgensville, Ky., over which a marble shrine has been erected, was not the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln.

It is a striking coincidence that on the very day of the publication of this article from Mr. Barbee, Mrs. Ella C. Gardner (Mrs. George N.) of Eastport, Me., presented to me a "Campaign Document," a 75-page booklet of 1860 by the Rev. William M. Thayer, published by Dinsmoor and Co., Boston, from which she had taken the photograph of Mr. Lincoln and the cabin in which Mr. Lincoln was born (or claimed to have been) and had them both framed, separately.

The cabin is not a "lean to" but a roughly enclosed cabin with a gable roof. This booklet was published in 1860 as a "campaign document" and whether the cabin is genuine, as claimed, I do not know.

Among other things, the booklet contains the eloquent closing appeal of Mr. Lincoln's first inaugural address, good for all of us to read and re-read at this particular time.

"In your hands, my dissatisfied fellow-countrymen, and not in mine, is the momentous issue of civil war. The Government will not assail you.

"You can have no conflict without being yourselves the aggressors. You have no oath registered in heaven to destroy the Government; while I shall have the most solemn one to 'preserve, protect and defend it.'

"I am loath to close. We are not enemies, but friends. We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break, our bonds of affection."

In this address Mr. Lincoln had previously stated . . . "there will be no invasion, no using of force against or among the people anywhere." What a tragedy could have been avoided had his appeal for peace been heeded.

The Aid That Counts

As one of those who have been forced to seek emergency aid of the Community Chest, I wish to express thankful gratitude for the existence of this wonderful organization.

I have never been a "loafer" minus ambition to make my own way; yet I have known—before the Chest became to be more than an organization to which one gave money once a year through newspaper and poster solicitation—humiliating destitution to the point where I tried to force myself to ask a passerby to buy me an inexpensive meal. I say "tried" because when I sought to utter the words, pride rose up and forbade them; I asked the time instead.

I have experienced hunger pangs such that it was agonizing (while hunting a job on an empty stomach) to pass a hamburger joint and smell meat frying and see people who had money inside eating. It is impossible to describe how "outside" everything I felt at such moments.

Because a person is neatly dressed in good taste it does not mean he may not be hungry; a good-looking handbag can be tragically empty Only those who have experienced privation realize that suffering yourself gives you a new outlook on your fellow man. It is incredible how alone and helpless one can feel when he or she is hungry and penniless and worried. Those who have been forced by circumstance to turn to the Community Chest for life-saving aid are probably the only ones to whom the Chest is not just a red-feather name on posters.

Franco's Freedom

In the October 14 Washington Post a letter with the headline, "Franco's Friendship" appeared. Its author (Mr. Stanley I. Stuber) seemed to have been impressed by a cartoon published in your paper on October 10. Mr. Stuber had "just returned from a visit to Spain as chairman of the commission on religious freedom of the Baptist World Alliance."

I wonder why he said it is beyond him to find justification for the "absolute dictatorship of Spain," where "Protestants are still being persecuted." It's not persecution of persons, it is a ban of the Protestant teaching in public, which in Spain is reasonable and just.

Spain is Catholic, and as Catholic she has the conscience that her faith is unique and true. It is not Franco who opposes the Protestants; it is the entire people of Spain. Franco is one among the Spaniards.

Rhodes Dinner

I was greatly shocked that you should allow your society department to publish an article on October 15 entitled "Tempest Among the Scholars," which was thoroughly insulting to the British Ambassador. According to Mrs. Thayer, certain Rhodes scholars are indignant because a dinner organized in honor of Sir Oliver Franks by local Rhodes scholars is being held in the Library of Congress restaurant and only $2 is being charged.

I am well acquainted with the Rhodes scholar group in Washington and I am unable to think of anyone who is so snobbish as to decline to attend an informal gathering because he was invited by a printed invitation.

But quite apart from that, Mrs. Thayer ought to know, without having to be told, that our party was planned with the approval of the Ambassador and for her to suggest that a $2 affair "is scarcely grand enough for even the most unpretentious Ambassador" is a gratuitous insult to a modest and charming gentleman who is apparently to be spared nothing because certain pretentious persons presume to dictate to him how he shall conduct his social life.

"Cooperative For Whom?"

Cooperative apartments have been rapidly coming to the front in the real estate field for some time, but does this necessarily mean that there is no legitimate place for their use? Is the conversion of a building from use as a rental project to one in which thrifty families may purchase their own homes ipso facto a racket?

Your editorial of October 16 implies that there is no benefit to the purchaser or to the tenant and that it is therefore a racket. Before I undertake to state the case for the purchaser let me say that not one of the buildings with which I am familiar that have been converted into cooperative apartments has been converted by the former landlord in an effort to pass on to the tenant maintenance which has been deferred by the landlord. If a promoter buys such a building outright and then converts it to cooperative apartment use he is usually able to offer the apartments at prices several thousand dollars cheaper than comparable apartments are selling in buildings that have been operating successfully under the cooperative plan. Is this necessarily a racket?

We all know that it is a hardship for anyone to be compelled to move while apartments are hard to find. But it is equally true that it is a hardship to thousands of permanent residents of Washington to go without homes because they cannot rent an apartment and at the same time cannot afford to buy a house. Since the opportunity to purchase is offered first to the occupant and then to outsiders if occupants do not choose to buy—is this a racket?

Contrary to what your editorial seems to imply, there is a real place for the cooperative apartment in the real estate field. Take the average person today who has saved up a modest sum as the down payment on a home and wishes to enjoy home ownership now rather than wait until that day in the future when the prices of houses may come down to the figures he can afford. He can buy a conveniently located apartment in a first class building for about half the price and about half the down payment that he would have to pay for the same number of sleeping rooms, living room, dinette, kitchen, and bath in a house. He can also be pretty well assured that when prices level off, he will be in a better financial position than if he had purchased a higher priced house.

Your editorial says, "In practice, what this means is that the tenant must 'plunk out' a substantial down payment and then in addition meet monthly amortization and maintenance charges that sometimes amount to more than his former rent." What you have failed to note is that in the usual setup about half of the amortization payment goes on the purchaser's investment the very first month and the ratio of principal payment increases each month until he is the owner in fee simple. As for the maintenance charge, it is always less than the purchaser would have to pay to keep up a house of equal value. Is it your purpose to discourage thrifty persons who prefer to own rather than rent?

Then you say, "If the higher courts do not act to 'slap down' such maneuvers, Congress itself ought to recognize the 'threat' when rent control comes up for reconsideration." Has it never occurred to you that these thrifty persons who are purchasing their own apartments are looking forward themselves to the day when Congress may not continue the rent controls and rents may go up, as some writers have stated recently, as much as 70 per cent?

Before I close I want to point out the advantages of cooperative ownership of homes to many persons in Washington to whom the ownership of an individual house would be impractical. Take the case of the unmarried working woman. She cannot assume the responsibility of managing a house, but she can enjoy ownership of a home in a cooperative project where she and others like her appoint a manager to see that the house is properly heated and cared for even in her absence. Her taxes and insurance are paid out of the funds built up by the modest maintenance payments which are made by her and her associates.

Then there are elderly couples who formerly lived in spacious houses and had servants. Under the existing conditions they turn to the ownership of cooperative apartments as the best kind of carefree living they can secure for themselves.

World Malady Of Fear

By Malvina Lindsay

U. N.'s Challenge

THE PRESENT session of the General Assembly of the United Nations is being held at a time when the physical condition of the world's people has generally improved, but when their morale is at its lowest postwar ebb. Gains have been made against hunger and physical disease, but the malady of fear is rampant. "A socially sick world" was the diagnosis last month at the International Congress on Mental Health. And the warning was added that only socially sick people "succumb to destructive ideologies."

The emotional plague of insecurity is expressing itself in a global pattern. Breakdown of marriage is increasing in many countries. Illegitimacy, abortion, venereal disease, suicide, are generally on the upgrade. Juvenile crime is a growing problem—young transient hordes are voicing their confusion and discontent on all continents. Bitterness between racial and political groups flares everywhere.

People fear each other and they fear the future. They fear hunger, disease, tyranny, atom bombs. One of the great powers, the Soviet Union, is deeply in the grip of a fear psychosis which, centered in the Kremlin, has been spread among the people until they are urged to turn from a "foreigner" as from a leper. Europe is jittery over becoming the battleground of a new war. Even in the United States, most powerful and prosperous of nations, fear rides high—fear of Russians, of Communists, of saboteurs, of Negroes, of Jews, of foreigners, of depression and of social change. Mental illness is increasing alarmingly. Alcoholism is becoming more of a threat.

ALTHOUGH the United Nations organization has taken a significant step along the mental approach to world problems by appointing a psychiatric consultant to its staff, yet the sessions of the General Assembly are not reflecting this new attitude. The world plague of fear is not being mentioned, let alone explored. The argument, the resolutions, the action, concern the surface questions of the day. The wars being generated in men's minds are not being brought into the open.

True, it may be asked: "What can a political body do about matters that are on the agenda of the subconscious? And are not UNESCO, the World Health Organization and the new World Federation for Mental Health working on these problems? Anyway what can be done about fear—except to eradicate it the slow way through knowledge and through mental health?"

Changing people is a slow process, as the mental health experts admitted at London. Until this can be done there will have to be emergency measures. Hence many of the experts on fear are advocating two steps along this line. One is a stronger United Nations, better equipped to hold a mentally sick world in leash. Repeatedly the authorities on human behavior, stalling as they are for time, come back to the device of bolder steps toward world government or a union of the Western democracies. At London one diagnostician of the world's state of mental health declared the United States and Britain alone in a federal union could hold the line against a war until the mental doctors could get in their licks on a fear-ridden and explosive humanity.

IN THE present General Assembly, some attempts may be made to revise the U. N. Charter. Before the Assembly is the resolution passed by the Little Assembly calling for a general conference for Charter revision. Meanwhile international events, some of them the outgrowth of the fear malady, seem to be fatefully driving the Western nations together politically.

But beyond all this the General Assembly could do something more immediate to calm an excited world if its members would practice the most elemental knowledge of human relations in their public utterances. If they lack this knowledge they could follow the precedent of the U. N. organization and avail themselves in their commissions and committees of the advice of those who have devoted their lives to studying how man behaves. Mental health experts volunteered such service at the recent London conference. It would seem that international psychological action for peace were as necessary and as feasible as psychological warfare, recently so widely prevalent. And where better to practice it in the only existing forum of mankind?

Support Of Dewey

As a long-time reader and supporter of The Washington Post's enlightened news and editorial columns, may I express the fervent hope that your many recent editorials commenting on the presidential candidacy of Dewey do not indicate that you are going to give him your outright support.

Fortunately, in one editorial you really recognize that Dewey still represents basic Republicanism; I refer to the editorial (September 25) in which you oppose the Dewey stand on the domestic control of atomic energy. I agree with you that this issue is of ultimate importance, and on this one item alone, if not on others, The Post should not scuttle its attitude of enlightened liberalism by formal support of the Republican candidate.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

The Oligarchs And The Dixiecrats

ATLANTA.—Ellis Arnall, former Governor of Georgia, is, like most Southerners, an enthusiastic football fan. And thereby hangs a tale. The tale is amusing, but it also casts considerable light on one aspect of Southern politics.

Some time ago, Arnall organized a party of friends to make the long trip from Atlanta to see the annual Sugar Bowl game in New Orleans. The party occupied a number of suites in an expensive New Orleans hotel. So it was with some understandable misgivings that Arnall, after the game, asked the hotel's lady cashier for his bill.

He was surprised when she smiled prettily and replied, "That's all right, Governor, your bill has been taken care of."

He was even more surprised when he was told that it was the Mississippi Power & Light Co. which had been so generous.

His amazement must have been obvious, and a sudden suspicion apparently crossed the mind of the lady cashier.

"You are the Governor of Mississippi, aren't you?" she asked.

THIS little story is not without meaning. The present Governor of Mississippi is Fielding Wright. Governor Wright is also the vice presidential candidate of the Dixiecrats, or States' Rights Party. It is pretty generally assumed outside of the South that the Dixiecrat movement is simply the South's outraged response to President Truman's civil rights proposals. It is that, but it is also a great deal more than that.

By and large, the Democratic Party in the South has been controlled by a conservative oligarchy. In other times, the oligarchs were mostly big planters. Now the planters have been pretty much replaced by utility magnates, textile men, industrialists, bankers and, more and more, the new oil barons of Texas and the Gulf States. The States Rights Party is essentially the response of this conservative oligarchy to the pressures which have been steadily pushing the national Democratic Party further to the Left. Almost every States' Rights politician speaks as bitterly of Franklin Roosevelt, who never really pressed the racial issue, as of Harry Truman, who did.

THERE is no doubt that there has been a particularly cozy relationship between the Dixiecrats and the oil kings. Southern oilmen were more enraged by the Supreme Court decision which awarded to the Federal Government ownership of the last great national oil reserves in the tidelands than by the Truman civil rights proposals. Nor was this rage confined to the Gulf States, for there is good reason to believe that offshore oil deposits exist along the Southern Atlantic seaboard as well. One indication of the influence of the oil men among the Dixiecrats is that the tidelands oil issue has received at least as much attention at the various Dixiecrat get-togethers as the civil rights issue.

Just how much oil money has greased the Dixiecrat wheels is unknown, although the Justice Department is now hard at work trying to find out. But there is no doubt that the oil industry's support for the Dixiecrats has been more than moral.

One leading supporter has been H. R. Cullen, a fabulously rich Houston oil man (he is also fabulously generous—he recently made an outright gift to Texas charity of the fantastic sum of 160 million dollars). Cullen arranged for a private plane to take H. Strom Thurmond, the Dixiecrat presidential candidate, to the Houston convention, and a special train to take Fielding Wright and his Mississippi cohorts to the same meeting. He is believed to be the chief sparkplug of the oil industry's backing for the Dixiecrats. Among the oil corporations, the Humble Oil Co. has reportedly particularly interested itself in the Thurmond-Wright "crusade."

THE OIL barons' generous enthusiasm for the Dixiecrats is now said to be waning. The Republicans are sure to win, and they are committed in their platform to removing offshore oil from Federal control. Yet in most Southern States, the Dixiecrat organization will be kept alive after the elections, largely to insure conservative control of the political machinery.

There is nothing particularly unhealthy in the fact that the oil men, or the other business interests, should try to protect or improve their economic position by political means. Every economic group in the United States does the same thing. Yet there are some pretty unhealthy aspects of the Dixiecrat movement as an expression of Southern conservatism.

All the more malodorous hatemongers, from Gerald L. K. Smith to the decrepit "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, have gleefully lept on the Dixiecrat bandwagon. The States' Rights propaganda paper is using the same mailing list as the Southern Outlook, a revolting racist sheet which the Montgomery Advertiser accurately compared to the worst products of Nazi Germany.

In brief, the real danger is that the Southern conservative oligarchy, in an effort to preserve the threatened status quo, will be tempted to turn more and more to this sort of thing, to the end that every issue, from offshore oil to the minimum wage, may be hidden and submerged in the race issue.

Mrs. Meyer Bespeaks Backing For Federal Educational Aid

New York, Oct. 19. — Mrs. Eugene Meyer, of the President's Commission on Higher Education today urged greater public support of Federal aid to eliminate "brutal inequalities" in our educational system.

The wife of the chairman of the board of The Washington Post was among speakers at the 17th annual New York Herald Tribune forum.

She charged that Congressmen who voted against the Senate bill to provide Federal funds for schools were practicing "a false economy, false in the face of our financial resources and false in the face of our economic and social needs."

"Let the legislators who say that we have not the money be told that the use of the national wealth to improve the quality of people is the surest method of producing more wealth," Mrs. Meyer said.

Warning by Conant

James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard University, urged greater discussion of communism in universities and elsewhere because "doctrines that are not combated in the classroom but treated merely with silence or contempt may be appealing to the immature."

Mrs. Rustin McIntosh, dean of Barnard College for Women at Columbia University, said American educators have let "our world slide into an abyss of technological and moral confusion."

"Our highly esteemed civilization has resulted in an environment which destroys the very qualities which have produced it: initiative, independence, intellectual resourcefulness.

"Our first goal must, therefore, be to impart to young people the freshness of intellectual excitement, the opportunity for independent and creative activity, the delight in discussion and discovery that form an essential part of true education."

Grade School Exchange

Paul R. Mort, professor of education at Columbia University's Teachers College, urged the fostering of "direct popular government" in local communities, and exchange of grade-school students between city and rural schools.

Pare Lorentz, writer, director and producer, outlined the untapped opportunities in visual education through documentary films.

Dr. Harold D. Lasswell, professor of law, Yale University, warned that the military program which this Nation is embarking upon to prevent dictation from abroad contains within it seeds of danger which might unwittingly result in the very garrison-police State which the country seeks to avoid.

Safeguarding Liberties

Beardsley Ruml, chairman of the board of R. H. Macy & Co., said that if a changing order must come, the traditional American liberties can be preserved only by the laborious effort of the rule-makers to gain the free consent of the people.

An atomic scientist, Philip M. Morse, professor of physics, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said that already the constrictions of free communication of scientific research placed upon American scientists was threatening to hamstring American scientific progress.

Other speakers were Leo Nejelski, member of the board of directors of the National Citizens Council on Civil Rights, and Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, Negro, who is attempting to obtain admission to the law school of the University of Oklahoma.

Paul A. Porter, former OPA director, proposed that the next President name Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower "to head a committee to study the present uncontrolled drift toward suppression of ideas." Porter spoke on "Loyalty and Civil Liberties."

Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.) member of the House Un-American Activities Committee, proposed a bipartisan policy for the administration of the Government's loyalty program.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Greek Tragedy

IF IT WERE not so tragic in relation to the contest between communism and the West, there would be something almost comic about what is happening in Greece today. It is Graustarkian comedy with the shadows of disaster in the immediate background.

Childs

Poor harassed, overworked, weary Secretary of State Marshall has had to go to Athens at this critical moment to try to make some sense out of the Greek riddle. And there is no sense in it, since what we are seeing is the compounding of the errors of the past.

When President Truman first sounded the Greek fire alarm, he announced to the world and to the little ruling clique in Athens that a Greece free of Communist dictatorship was essential to the United States. That was true. But in the way in which he proclaimed the alarm, the President, in effect, helped to give a permanent lease on control to the narrow, reactionary Athens clique.

Their interest is not in ending guerilla resistance. To end it would end the flow of American aid and American dollars. So one month we get glowing communiques from the front that tell of heroic victories by the Greek armies. And the next month the press association dispatches suggest that stalemate and even mutiny are just around the corner unless more American aid is forthcoming at once.

WHEN I was in Greece a year ago, it seemed to me that Dwight Griswold, the aid administrator who retired recently, was trying to do a necessary job of persuading the Greeks to broaden and expand their government. The objective was to get more confidence from the Greek people and thereby cut down the support and sympathy for the rebels.

He succeeded, over the opposition of the State Department and the then Ambassador, in bringing the Liberal leader, Themistocles Sophoulis, in as Prime Minister. That was the limit of Griswold's success and the aged Sophoulis has been to a large degree a captive of the Athens clique represented by the Populist Party.

The State Department has from the beginning seen nothing but the Populists and the royal family. Both in the department here and in the embassy in Athens they have clung to outward forms and the dead letter of the past.

They have regarded criticism as a form of treason and have pettishly suggested that any newspapermen who did not go along with State Department policy were themselves Communists. This attitude conveniently ignores the deep discontent of the Greek people, who are certainly not Communists except in a small minority. But they are deeply democratic at heart and they want a government to which they can give some allegiance.

Unfortunately for the State Department attitude, the ship owners, the bankers and industrialists who back the Athens clique have shown little inclination to play the game. With few exceptions, their capital is still safely tucked away in New York banks. They are uneasy refugees in their own land, ready to flee to safety at a moment's warning and unwilling to make even the slightest sacrifice.

NO ONE denies that the task of subduing the guerillas is enormously difficult. From Greece's Communist neighbors, Albania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, aid comes across the border to reinforce the guerilla bands when they are hard pressed.

But the aid these primitive countries can furnish must surely be small and elementary in comparison to the military help that the United States has furnished the Greek army. This includes planes and other fighting equipment. While aid of this sort might come from Soviet Russia by way of Albania, there has never been any evidence to show that the guerillas were being given modern material in quantity. They have relied on guerilla tactics and the ability to retreat into mountain fastnesses.

The latest press association reports suggest demoralization in the Greek army. An anonymous American Army officer attached to the Greek forces is quoted as saying that the Greek soldier seems to feel he has nothing to fight for. A large-scale offensive is mounted and then nothing happens.

At this strategic moment, when more aid is sought, the government in Athens announces a "solution" of the George Polk murder, an announcement which should be taken with decided reservation. There may still be time for a new approach to the Greek tragedy, although it is already very late.

Ewing Told To Stop Using Federal Chef

By the United Press

Lindsay Warren, "watchdog" of the U. S. Treasury, has ordered Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing to stop using a $62-a-week Government cook as his "personal servant," it was disclosed yesterday.

Warren said he found it "objectionable" to require an employe of St. Elizabeth's Hospital to prepare meals in Ewing's private office when his salary is "paid from public funds."

Ewing repeated his defense of the arrangement as "in the public interest" but denied that he ever used the cook "as a personal servant . . . in any sense." He added that he would comply with Warren's ruling until he can ask Congress for specific legislation authorizing him to continue the arrangement.

Claims Chef Saves Time

The arrangement, freely admitted by Ewing, was first disclosed by a Senate Appropriation Subcommittee. It protested to Warren that Congress did not appropriate funds for a "private" chef for Ewing and suggested that the FSA official might be violating Federal budget regulations.

The cook, Neaser James Kelly, a Negro, testified at a closed subcommittee hearing that he spent about five hours daily in the FSA kitchen preparing luncheons for Ewing and other top FSA officials and guests. He said he remained on the St. Elizabeth's payroll at $3225 a year.

Ewing's answer said the hospital was reimbursed for Kelly's time from FSA administrative funds. Having a private chef, he added, saved both time and money because he and his aides could talk business while they ate instead of taking time off to go out for lunch.

Should Have Consulted First

Warren, in a letter to Ewing dated last Friday and which FSA made public yesterday, advised that a member of his staff had investigated and found the arrangement "very questionable."

"Upon the facts of record," he wrote, "I regard the matter of the assignment for your personal use of a cook whose salary is paid from public funds as objectionable in the absence of specific authority in the appropriation or other law."

He pointed out that the Budget and Accounting Act authorizes Federal officials when in doubt, to consult the General Accounting Office about a proposed expenditure.

"It certainly would seem," he commented, "that in a case such as that here involved, where it was proposed to use a regular Government employe as a personal servant to the head of an agency, the situation called for the submission to the Comptroller General of a request for an advance decision."

Truman Aid on Peace Pacts, Roosevelt Aim

By The Associated Press

Harry Hopkins said on the day of President Roosevelt's funeral that the Chief Executive's main reason for selecting Harry S. Truman as his running mate in 1944 was to gain his help in securing Senate ratification of the peace treaties.

The statement is reported by Robert E. Sherwood in his book "Roosevelt and Hopkins," which Harper & Bros. will publish today.

Sherwood, playwright and a White House intimate at that time, accompanied Hopkins to his home after the service. Sherwood thus recalls these remarks of Hopkins, whom Sherwood considers Roosevelt's closest aide and confidante:

"I'm certain that the President had made up his mind on Truman long before I got back to the White House last year. . . . People seemed to think that Truman was just suddenly pulled out of a hat—but that wasn't true. The President had had his eye on him for a long time.

'Committee Record Good'

"The Truman committee record was good—he'd got himself known and liked around the country—and above all he was very popular in the Senate. That was the biggest consideration. The President wanted somebody that would help him when he went up there and asked them to ratify the peace."

In the same conversation, Hopkins made a prediction: that Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace would be "the last one to quit the cabinet voluntarily." As it turned out, Wallace was, in fact, the last of the original New Dealers to leave the cabinet. Mr. Truman asked him to leave in September, 1946.

Another prediction by an eminent person that Sherwood cites in the book proved less accurate. Hopkins related after a visit to Prime Minister Winston Churchill that the Prime Minister "does not believe Japan wants war." That was less than five months before the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor.

The book provides background on Hopkins' various missions to Soviet Premier Josef Stalin as the President's personal emissary. Hopkins was sent on his final mission in May 1945 by President Truman at the suggestion of W. Averell Harriman, then Ambassador to the Soviet Union.

Polish Issue, U. N. Agreement

The purpose of this mission was to attempt to work out some agreement with Stalin on the Polish issue and on voting procedure in the Security Council by the United Nations.

The San Francisco Conference organizing the United Nations at that time was almost stalled for lack of agreement between the Russians and their Allies. Hopkins succeeded in obtaining an understanding which apparently satisfied the United States Government at that time.

As a result of his contacts with the Russians, Hopkins expressed confidence in August 1945 that the United States and the U. S. S. R. would remain on friendly terms because the peoples of both nations admired and respected each other.

"The great enigma about the motion of world-wide communism. Soviet Union in the years to come There is every indication that the is the policy which new leaders of Soviet government today is becom- Russia will have toward the pro- ing more and more nationalistic."

McNamee Is Elected to Succeed Carson As Prince Georges County Board President

Harry W. McNamee of Berwyn, Md., was elected president of the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners yesterday at a meeting in Upper Marlboro. McNamee succeeds the late William A. Carson of Riverdale, who died Thursday night. His election was unanimous.

McNamee

The new board president, a retired merchant, lives at 8806 49th ave. He served as county commissioner from 1934 to 1938, as county treasurer from 1939 to 1943, and in 1946 was again elected a commissioner. He is married and has a daughter and two sons.

A recommendation to Governor Lane on a successor to Carson as member of the board of commissioners is expected to made by the county's Democratic State Central Committee after the November elections.

The commissioners yesterday awarded the contract for bituminous surfacing of Colesville rd. from Queens Chapel rd. to University la., at a cost of $6 a yard, to the Contee Sand & Gravel Co. of Laurel, the low bidder. Contract for repairing streets in West Lanham Hills Special Improvement District 12, at a cost of $3500 was awarded to Corson & Druman Co. of Washington.

The commissioners voted to postpone their regular November 2 meeting to November 4, because of election day.

Police Here Seek Slayer Of Cab Driver

Washington police were alerted yesterday to watch for a 19-year-old Negro in connection with the pistol slaying of a cab driver whose body was found near Martinsville, Va.

Martinsville police said the man sought is Matthew Hairston, jr., 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighing 165 pounds and having a dark scar on left side of his neck.

Body of the cab driver, who was shot twice with a .22-caliber weapon was found about 10 miles from Martinsville. He was identified as Doughty Lee Bouldin, 29, of Fieldale, Va., 6 miles from Martinsville.

Police said a resident reported seeing the Negro get into Bouldin's taxi Monday afternoon in Martinsville. The abandoned cab was found yesterday morning on Route 211, near Gainesville, Va.

When Bouldin's body was discovered yesterday at 1:30 p. m. on a side road near Route 57 to Mount Valley, Va., police changed their original lookout for the man to include "wanted for murder."

Police said the man may have come to Washington, since the abandoned cab was on the road to Manassas, Va., between Martinsville and the Capital.

Gen. Le May Takes New Command

Command of all American strategic air forces passed formally yesterday to Lieut. Gen. Curtis Le May, former chief of United States Air Forces in Europe.

The 41-year-old Le May, who directed the final B-29 bombing of Japan in World War II, arrived here from Europe Sunday to take over the strategic command from Gen. George C. Kenney, who has been made head of the Air University at Montgomery, Ala.

Credit Rules' Effect on Sales Is Discounted

By S. Oliver Goodman

Federal credit regulations, re-imposed September 20, won't cause Christmas sales to backslide, Lindley S. Crowder predicted last night.

Crowder

Dollar volume of Yule trade ought to equal or exceed last year's total because of continued high prices, but unit transactions may be lower, said Crowder, general manager of the National Retail Credit Association. The group has more than 25,000 members throughout the country.

Crowder, here to address the local Retail Credit Association, said that so far the loudest howls against revived Regulation W have come from "fellows who sell credit terms, not merchandise." Dealers in "new-used cars" also object vehemently to bigger down payments and shorter pay periods, he said.

Retailers generally, Crowder thinks, are about evenly divided on their feelings toward Federal controls. Opponents would rather have voluntary curbs. Many credit men who felt that Regulation W was unnecessary during the war because merchandise was unavailable, now favor the restrictions, Crowder pointed out.

Presiding at last night's meeting in the Washington Hotel was Warren E. Tydings of Hecht Co., president of the local Retail Credit Association. More than 90 leading credit men attended and participated actively in questions from the floor.

PRIVATE SALE: Announcement of the placement with a large group of insurance companies of 250 million dollars in 4 per cent bonds by Shell Caribbean Petroleum Co. was one of the largest privately placed loans in history. It came as a shock to bank underwriting which normally would be called in to bid competitively and later publicly sell such a large aggregation of capital.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: New officers of Willys of Washington, Inc., were elected yesterday as follows: Bernard Cohen, president; Robert G. Russell and C. Lee DeOrsay, vice presidents, and Milton S. Kronheim, jr., secretary-treasurer . . . Thornton W. Owen of Perpetual Building Association and F. Willson Camp of District Building and Loan Association have been named delegates to the annual conference of the U. S. League in New York, November 8-12 . . . Grant Stauffer, Kansas City, was elected president of Chicago Great Western Railway Co., succeeding H. W. Burtness .

ANECDOTE: Frank M. Totten, vice president of Chase National Bank, kept local bankers chuckling the other night at their annual fall meeting. In one of his anecdotes, Totten claims he was discussing new things in science with Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National, and asked: "Bob, have you seen that thing that fastens on your arm and can detect when you're lying?" Retorted Fleming: "Seen one? I married one!"

ODD LOTS: Lawrence B. Sheppard, president of the National Shoe Manufacturers Association, said yesterday there is "no apparent possibility of any reductions in shoe prices." . . . The United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago has set aside findings that General Foods Corp. and three other defendants manipulated cash and future prices of rye in May, 1944 . . . Trade circles report that certain producers of both zinc and lead have hiked their prices . . . Agriculture Department predicts that domestic production of shorn wool in 1949 may be the smallest since records were started in 1909 . . . Jerome I. Udell, president of Max Udell & Co., in open letter to 5000 retailers called on retailers, garment makers and weavers to do everything possible to "drive men's clothing prices down." . . . Fire losses for the past 12 months were estimated at $711,576,000, highest ever recorded in the United States . . . Association of American railroads estimated that Class 1 railroads' operating revenues in September were 15.6 per cent higher than in same 1947 month .

EARNINGS: Eaton Manufacturing Co. reported net income of $8,042,865 for the first nine months this year, equal to $9.02 a common share, compared with $5,548,192 or $6.22 a share in the same 1947 period. Other earnings reported:

African Heir And English Bride

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

HE MUST EXPLAIN—Seretse Khama, 27-year-old heir-apparent to the Bamangwate tribal throne, Bechuanaland, Africa, and his 24-year-old bride, the former Ruth Williams, London office worker, sit for their picture in their London apartment. Khama, who left his home to study law in London, will return Thursday to explain to his uncle, the regent of his tribe, why he became the first member of his tribe to wed a white girl. He declared he would either return to the British capital for his bride or send for her "whatever happens"

Mrs. Roosevelt Backs Truman

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has written President Truman: "I am unqualifiedly for you as the Democratic candidate for the Presidency."

Mrs. Roosevelt wrote the President October 4 from the Hotel Crillon in Paris where she is attending the United Nations Assembly sessions. The White House made public her letter today.

FTC Member Hits Court on Cement Rule

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 19 (U.P.).—A member of the Federal Trade Commission charged today that the recent cement case decision by the U. S. Supreme Court has made the terms "businessman and law violator virtually synonymous."

FTC Commissioner Lowell B. Mason told a joint session of the National Wholesale Hardware Association and American Hardware Manufacturers Association that the commission now can sue practically every businessman in the country engaged in interstate commerce.

"The implications of the cement case decision are such as can make the FTC the most powerful concentration of bureaucratic power over business in the world," Mason said.

In a case involving cement prices, the court ruled that any type of pricing except f. o. b. mill pricing is illegal and outlawed the basic point system, freight absorption and zone pricing.

Mason estimated that the decision would affect approximately 120,000 firms and at the rate of 120 cease and desist orders a year, the FTC "would need 1000 years to clear them up."

"With the law staying this way, you can see what a wonderful prize it would be in this guess-who contest if we could fix it so Uncle Sam would stop your competitor from absorbing freight, allowing quantity discounts, and making known prices," Mason said, "and at the same time put your name at the bottom of the pile so you were not sued for a thousand years."

Effort on Population Will Be Discussed

Whether a Supreme Court ruling on basing point pricing may cause a heavy shift in American Population will be discussed Thursday at a Chicago meeting by a Harvard research director.

The director is Dr. Melvin T. Copeland, of the Harvard University School of Business Administration.

He also is chairman of the Industry Advisory Council to the Senate Trade Policies Committee, which hold a two-day meeting October 21-22 in Chicago to study industry reaction to the Supreme Court ruling.

3-Year Term

Poe Ordered To Prison in Bank Fraud

Frederick, Md., Oct. 19 (AP).—Howard R. Poe, Hagerstown garage man, was sentenced in Circuit Court here today to three years in prison for defrauding a Frederick bank.

Sergt. Charles V. Main of the Maryland State Police told Associate Judge Patrick M. Schnauffer the fraud may run to $100,000, involving lending institutions in at least two neighboring Maryland counties and nearby Pennsylvania.

Poe pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining $6600 from the Farmers and Mechanics National Bank of Frederick under false pretenses.

Judge Schnauffer suspended several other charges, noting that Poe faces prosecution in other jurisdictions. He also suspended a similar charge against Frederick Henry Wishard, Hagerstown school bus operator, in a companion case involving $1650 obtained from the Middletown (Md.) Savings Bank.

Judge Schnauffer commented that Wishard apparently did not benefit personally from the transactions, but he could hardly have been ignorant of what was going on.

Gordon Palmer, assistant cashier, said Poe negotiated a loan on two new trucks, which the bank could not find when it sought to foreclose on the notes. Other notes financed in other lending institutions also were for vehicles which have not been found, Sergeant Main told the court.

Court Studies Kamp Appeal On Contempt

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday took under advisement an appeal from the contempt-of-Congress conviction of Joseph P. Kamp, official of the Constitutional Educational League, Inc.

Kamp was found guilty earlier in District Court of willfully refusing to obey a subpena commanding him to bring a record of contributors to his organization to a hearing of a special congressional committee to investigate campaign expenditures. Kamp appeared but refused to produce the records.

He was sentenced to serve four months in jail and pay a $100 fine, but was freed pending the appeal.

Kamp's attorney, John J. Wilson, argued that the indictment was improper since it did not contain a charge that Kamp had possession of the records. He also contended that the congressional subpena was invalid in that it did not order Kamp to bring in the records. Instead, it was in such a form that it ordered the sergeant-at-arms to bring in Kamp and the records.

Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz argued that neither point could result in reversible error since Kamp admitted knowing what records were meant and did appear before the committee and state his position.

One on the Aisle—

'Cynical' Nathan Is Still in Love

By Richard L. Coe

THIS WRITING WORLD: Belying his formidable reputation, George Jean Nathan is a much maligned man . . . A prodigious memory that often suggests he was present at the opening of the First Shepherd's Play, and a filing system that must keep many minions working nights, hint that he is ancient of days . . . A sense of perspective, often the last quality one finds in dramatic critics, gives him an approach to every play that shatters most press agents' claims to originality of their wares . . . An imposing usage of the language and a general disregard for the short sentences that are one of the journalistic commandments, make his pronouncements ring with a scholarly style that implies unerring wisdom . . . Now Mr. Nathan has come along with his latest annual, a resume of the '47-'48 theater season in New York, and for collectors of theater books this is, as usual, a must . . . The dean of the New York critics writes beguilingly about everything—a poor evening in the theater can produce from him far more copy than a good one, and he covers all aspects of chatter, from the universal habit of battling over the skills of various leading actresses to the reason for bad plays . . . ("They are produced because their sponsors do not know any better), which information should earn me the undying gratitude of those of my colleagues who up to now have been frantically scratching their brains for the explanation and have been despairful at ever finding the answer." . . . But, as I say, Mr. Nathan is not the bitter old man his pieces have suggested to some . . . He is at heart still a young man in love with grease paint . . . This he tacitly admits in his book's final pages: "After an hour or two of lying under the trees and staining my trousers with an ineradicable green, I would welcome the relief of even another 'Dr. Social.' After getting my mouth and ears full of salt water and enough sand in my hair to fill all the cigarette extinguishing jardinaires in the Waldorf, I yearn for another look at even 'That Rats of Norway.'" . . . No, Nathan's not an old cynic . . . After all these years, he's still young in heart, city-struck and theater-crazy.

("THE THEATER BOOK OF THE YEAR: 1947-1948, by George Jean Nathan, Knopf, $4.)

ANOTHER theater book just off the press is a new edition of Bernard Sobel's "The Theatre Handbook and Digest of Plays" . . . This is the sixth edition of a work which first appeared eight years ago, in which time it has become invaluable to librarians, students, editors and theater fans' bookshelves . . . Sobel outlines plots of classic plays, includes essays on the theater and allied arts by such folks as Tallulah Bankhead, Washington's Leif Eid, Abe Green of Variety and Brock Pemberton, and tacks down elusive dates . . . You're amused to find that Lynn Fontanne's birthdate is the same as it's been in his past editions, 1882, a canard which I'll never believe, however the pundits agree . . . I'm sorry to find, too, that Sobel still thinks Alois Lang of the Oberammergau Passion Play is Anton Lang's son, for he's only a cousin . . . And the bibliography is illuminating, though there are several curious omissions with which space may have played a critical part . . . At all events, here are 897 pages chockful of theater, which may make you believe there is such a thing even though the National isn't here any more.

("THE THEATER HANDBOOK AND DIGEST OF PLAYS," edited by Bernard Sobel, Grown Publishers, $4.)

AN ANONYMOUS producer calling himself "David Ames"—you might find his real one in Sobel's book—writes on "A Producer Looks at Show Business" in "Tomorrow," now on the magazine stands . . . It's a trenchant criticism of the financial impasse facing the professional theater . . . "Ames" traces how the rise in costs has destroyed initiative, taste and courage in the producing ranks, leading producers to rely on angels, who simply view a play as an investment . . . Which dampens ingenuity of playwrights and leads to Variety's shocking summation of critics in its yearly "box scores" . . . He winds up: "Possibly collapse and disaster will finally shake off the parasites and leave the path open for the true knights" . . . It's a good piece, well worth reading.

A PRESS AGENT—and I strongly suspect Dick Maney—is responsible for the New York ads in graceful print: "Mr. and Mrs. Clarence S. Day, At Home, on Wednesday evening, October twentieth, from eight until eleven o'clock at Fourteen hundred and thirty Broadway. Entertainment" . . . That's all there is, but no one needs to be told it refers to tonight's opening at the Empire of "Life With Mother."

PATRICK HAYES, the local impresario, has been doing some writing, too—in French, a charming amalgamation of sheer commerce and Gallic grace calling attention to the Constitution Hall Concert on December 1 by the National Orchestra of France, Charles Muench conducting . . . An observant, if unimpressed, society writer has questioned whether anyone will understand the Hays invitation, but it was clear she did.

BILL DOLL, another publicist, has been spreading huge four sheets through the mail which turn out to be a campaign poster in the best American tradition, reading "For President: Vote for Lucille T. Wellington" . . . And Irene Rich's picture is that big . . . It's all in honor of "As the Girl's Go," the New York-bound, musical in which Bobby Clark plays the husband of our first lady President.

AND A CRITIC turned fiction writer is one of today's Book and Author Luncheon guests at the Statler. Richard Lockridge, who with his wife, Frances, came up with the Mr. and Mrs. North series . . . From 1928 to '43, Lockridge was aisle-sitter for the New York Sun, but the Norths' success has put them in the position of being able now to buy their own theater tickets . . . At today's luncheon at the Statler I'm going to ask him if he misses the job which seems still to delight the lively Nathan.

Police Station Poker Leads Officer to Steal

New York, Oct. 19 (U.P.)—Policeman William H. Schneider, 30, was sentenced to an indeterminate prison term today for a $3 liquor store holdup.

He admitted he stole because he had gone hopelessly in debt because of losses in poker games in the "back room" of police headquarters.

Fairfax Seeks Relocation of Beacon Airport

The Fairfax County School Board last night termed the Beacon Airport near Groveton School a hazard to school children and voted to ask the Civil Aeronautics Administration how the air field can be removed.

The Groveton Parent-Teachers Association had requested the board to take action after a plane from the airport crashed into a house next to the school on October 9.

The airport and the school are located close to each other just off Route No. 1, about three miles south of Alexandria.

Last year a petition from more than 700 parents in the area had asked the board to try to close the airport but no action was taken. It was pointed out at that time that the airport was in operation before the school was built.

Rent or Cafe Eviction Urged

The operator of the Municipal Center lunchroom, the District governments' perennial problem, should either be evicted immediately or start paying rent, District Auditor A. R. Pilkerton declared last night.

Pilkerton said he is drafting a recommendation to that effect for the District Commissioners and plans to submit it today.

His position is that if the Commissioners want to permit the establishment to continue, even though it does not conform to Health Department and License Department regulations, rent should be paid.

If they insist on making it conform to such rules, competitive bids for operation of the eating place should be invited, Pilkerton said.

An interested observer of the deliberations of the city fathers is Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, who has asked that the site of the rent-free lunchroom be utrned over for use as it was originally intended—as a police pistol range.

The department has a range at present on the second floor of a two-story building at 469 C st. nw., but this structure is scheduled for razing after the Commissioners find space for activities now housed in this building and others near the Center.

The lunchroom, operated by Mrs. Vada Daniels, has been under fire by various Federal and District officials for the past 26 months, but has managed to remain in business.

Experts Laud Rule Changes Proposed for D. C. Traffic

Proposed revisions of District traffic regulations, now on their way to the Commissioners, came in for thumping acclaim from automotive and safety experts yesterday.

Compliments were expressed in many quarters for the apparent success of the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board in offering a uniform set of traffic regulations to conform to those of States and other cities.

"The District should receive a bouquet for taking the leadership in this field," said Harold Hammond, manager of the Transportation Department of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

LaVerne Johnson, assistant director of traffic engineering of the American Automobile Association, said "there can be no question that automotive authorities will favor the proposed changes 100 per cent."

A professional student of traffic and safety matters for 24 years Charles Stark, secretary of the National Committee on Uniform Traffic Laws and Ordinances, commented:

"The proposed changes make us very hopeful for uniformity in traffic regulations, provided there are no emasculations, departures and deviations from the study as presented."

A subcommittee of the Commissioners' Advisory Traffic Board, headed by Nathan M. Lubar, presented the 174 sections of the proposed law to the board Monday night. Unanimous approval sent them on to the Commissioners for concurrence.

Fire Losses Set New High Record In Past 12 Months

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Fire losses for the past 12 months reached the highest total ever recorded in the United States, the National Board of Fire Underwriters announced today.

For the 12-month period ended September 30 fire losses were estimated at $711,576,000. For the previous 12 months losses were $660,890,000.

There was an increase of 4.1 per cent last month to $49,945,000 as compared with a year ago, but there was an increase of only .8 per cent in September over August.

ARMY—West Point may have canceled out its series with Notre Dame one year too early. Army brass politely cloaked its run-out with protests that the Army-Notre Dame game was getting to be too much of a ticket scalpers' paradise and otherwise busting the bounds of a college contest, but obviously Army people were getting tired of taking those beatings from the Irish.

POVICH

This is the year, though, when the Cadets could do combat with Notre Dame with a fair chance of winning. It's a slick outfit that Earl Blaik has gathered unto himself up on the Hudson. They haven't knocked of any Titans yet but they have slapped down Villanova, Lafayette, Illinois and Harvard in succession, and could reel off an unbeaten season without Blanchard and Davis on the Academy payroll.

Blaik has come up with the East's fanciest back in Sophomore Gil Stephenson and he may have the fastest in Bobby Stuart. His T-formation, as usual, is syrup-smooth, only a cut below the pros. Quarterback Andy Galiffa is no Arnold Tucker at passing the ball, but he has that same excellent thief-in-the-night faking ability. The Cadets had some first-half worries against Harvard but they ought to bump Cornell out of the ranks of the unbeaten on Saturday.

HARVARD—The Harvards were sort of wonderful despite that 20-7 beating by Army, a brash young team that had no business making it even that close. Their ability, unfortunately, couldn't quite parallel their enthusiasm. They had a tremendous zest, though, and tried bravely to make their intricate Michigan-style single wing work. Coach Arthur Valpey, an emigre from Michigan, was working with too many good students and not enough good football players, however.

Valpey's plight recalls the similar straits of Clark Shaughnessy at Chicago U. after College President Robert Hutchison decreed the game be deemphasized. The school embarked on a new policy of 10-cent football, and it was worth every nickel of it. Shanghnessy found himself with a squad of enthusiastic Phi Beta Kappas strange to the ways of football, but willing to die for dear old Chicago U., to a point.

Chicago was in the process that year of taking one of its frequent 70-0 beatings and one of its scholarly guards finally became somewhat wroth. The opposition sent six consecutive plays through him, trampling him down on each occasion. Gallantly he kept returning to the scrimmage line until a seventh straight play was sent at him and three blockers trampled his features once more. Whereupon he arose again, unsnapped his headgear, turned to Shaughnessy on the sidelines, flung his helmet to the ground and exclaimed with sincerity:

"This, is positively futile!"

FIGHTS—I have it straight from Promoter Goldie Ahearn, who has no interest in tomorrow night's Uline fight, aside from the gate receipts, that Vinnie Rossano will give Kid Gavilan a rugged time of it, again. Apparently there is much to be said for Rossano and Ahearn says it at the drop of a hint his words might get in the paper.

"It's like this," says Ahearn. "From revenge, Rossano is fighting this fight. From two revenges, he is fighting it, I mean. First he is wanting revenge from their last fight in Madison Square Garden when Gavilan gets the decision for no reason after Vinnie puts him down in the first round. And then he is wanting from revenge for his brother Rocky, who don't like Gavilan, either."

Brother Rocky's distaste for Gavilan stems, it seems, from a small encounter they had in New York a couple of weeks ago. They met briefly. At the end of 35 seconds of the first round, Gavilan severed relations by knocking out Brother Rocky. "That is what I mean," says Ahearn. "Nobody should like it if his kid brother is knocked out by a guy, so Vinnie is on there with the same guy at Uline Arena Thursday night, plenty of tickets on sale."

PAY-OFF. The World Series provided a nice payday for the Indians and Braves who got individual shares of $6772 and $4570, respectively, out of the pot. The biggest paycheck, though, went to Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler, whose over-all take totaled $245,052. For himself, Chandler keeps only $50,000 of the swag, however, with which to pay himself his yearly salary.

Out of the rest of the Commissioner's share, Chandler pays off the eight umpires at $2000 apiece, pays the expenses of his Cincinnati headquarters and office staff, and pays the half dozen former FBI agents he has hired to spy on the ball players who make all the money for the commissioner. The spying is for protection against what could be conduct detrimental to baseball.

Chandler's the boss, though, of the World Series split. He can either approve or disapprove the divvy voted by the players. The Braves, somewhat resentful of the $60,000 bonus given Rookie Pitcher John Antonelli to sign a contract, didn't include him in their World Series split. Chandler voted him in for a $371 honorarium, though, to be paid by the Braves.

Pick-The-Winner Lineup This Week

CAN UNBEATEN Cornell beat unbeaten Army? Will Iowa upset Notre Dame? What can Minnesota do against Michigan?

Those are some of the questions you football fans will have to answer in the Washington Post's Pick-the-Winners Contest this week.

This is a contest of skill. Your knowledge of the teams will be an important factor. So follow the accounts of the teams each week, study their scores, then make your choices of the winners.

The contest will be conducted weekly through November 20.

The winner of each weekly contest will receive two (2) tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 27, and an all-expenses-paid trip to the big game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four (4) tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. This game will be selected by The Washington Post.

CONTEST RULES

All entries must be in the hands of the FOOTBALL CONTEST EDITOR not later than 4 p. m. Friday of each week. Entries should be left at the Service Counter in the lobby of The Washington Post Bldg., 1337 E St. NW.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week shall be declared the winner. In case of ties, all persons sharing in the tie will receive duplicate awards.

The decisions of the judges shall be final.

Entries submitted must be legible, with the selections listed in the order they are announced in The Washington Post.

Entries may be handwritten or typewritten. However, carbon copies and mimeographed copies or copies made by any other duplicating machine will NOT be accepted. You may submit as many entries as you wish.

No person will be eligible to win the weekly contest twice.

Vic Banonis Reinstated For Hoya Game Friday

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Georgetown's Capt. Vic Banonis, star center, who was unable to make the Tulsa trip for disciplinary reasons, will be back in the lineup for Friday night's Griffith Stadium game with the Fordham Rams.

Banonis, who was restricted to the campus for more than a week after violating a curfew rule, received the good news last night from Rev. Emory A. Ross, S.J., prefect of discipline.

Father Ross termed the whole incident "regrettable," but said at Georgetown all students are treated alike.

Vic Blames Self

Said Banonis, "It was all my fault and I hope to make up for letting the team down by playing twice as hard."

The return of Banonis won't help the slim chances of Fordham. Big Ram weakness is its line and the burly Georgetown forward has shown to advantage against the tough opponents it has faced.

The Hoyas figure to romp in their next three games, all of which will be played here. However, Coach Jack Hagerty isn't about to be lulled by the experts' opinion of his team's chances.

Hagerty Looks for Trouble

Last seeason, Georgetown walloped Fordham, 40-7, and Ed Danowski's predominantly sophomore club shouldn't cause too much trouble. But Hagerty's been around long enough to say, "That's when you get your trouble—when you're not looking for it."

He wants to keep his team at the peak form it displayed in beating Tulsa, 13-7, last Saturday. Hagerty seems to feel there's a danger his boys will start overlooking Fordham, Denver and N.Y.U. before they meet strong Villanova and a GW team that already thinks of little except beating Georgetown.

Nonetheless, you have to make the Hoyas a strong favorite over Fordham. In four starts, the Rams have split even but took a 53-14 trouncing from Lafayette in their first game. They showed improvement in losing to Canisius, 30-21, but scored their only victories over relatively minor opposition—Kings Point, 48-0, and St. Francis, 41-0.

It seems a long time since Jimmy Crowley had those great teams at Fordham when the Rams had the "seven blocks of granite," and a perennial "Rose Hill to Rose Bowl" cry . . . Maybe it's been too long for the Fordham alumni, word is the Rams are anxious to regain some of their lost football prestige . . . That broken collar-bone suffered by Babe Baranowski, Georgetown's wonderful little tailback, is proving troublesome. The Babe had to return to Georgetown Hospital and have another cast put on it, he will be in the hospital another 10 days to two weeks . . . Hoya Tackle Phil Funk became the father of a baby boy Friday—mother and 8½-pound Michael are doing nicely in GEORGE WASHINGTON HOSPITAL . . . Soph Tom Hardiman, of Concord, N. H., was put in a tight spot against Tulsa. He went in with the Hoyas on their own 11-yard line and coolly ran for a first down in two tries . . . Incidentally, the people in Tulsa are sure down on their losing team. They seem to forget that four losses have been handed them by tough teams and in every game Tulsa has outgained its opponent . . .

Where to Buy Tickets for Sunday's Basketball Games

Tickets for the Touchdown Club's pro basketball doubleheader at Uline Arena Sunday night may be purchased at Farkas' Sporting Goods Store, the Fairway Sports Shop and Uline Arena.

The benefit twin bill pits the Washington Caps against the New York Knicks and the Baltimore Bullets against the Philadelphia Warriors.

Mrs. Stuhldreher Writes 'Fans Aren't Human' Story

Madison, Wis., Oct. 19 (AP).—Mrs. Mary Stuhldreher, wife of Harry Stuhldreher, Wisconsin's football coach, is the author of an article entitled "Football Fans Aren't Human" in this week's issue of a national magazine.

Mrs. Stuhldreher wrote the article (for The Saturday Evening Post) last winter, incorporating her 20 years' experience as wife of a football mentor. She was sitting in the stands Saturday when the anti-Stuhldreher rumblings came in the form of a sign and song entitled "Goodby Harry," while Wisconsin was losing to Yale 17-7.

Mrs. Stuhldreher said today she titled the piece "They Were After His Scalp" and added, "because Harry has hardly any hair on his head." The editors changed the title.

Student Board Asks Support for Team

Madison, Wis., Oct. 19 (AP).—The University of Wisconsin Student Board tonight asked wholehearted support for the Badger football team and censured "certain members" of the student body for "unsportsmanlike conduct" at Saturday's Yale-Wisconsin game.

At the same time, the student group "recommended strongly" that no referendum be taken during the present season "regarding any members of the football coaching staff."

Signs Point to G. W.

Maryland Thinks It Knows Now Who Kidnaped 'Testudo'

The mystery of the disappearance of Testudo, the University of Maryland's 400-pound bronze terrapin, seemed near solution yesterday.

The Hatchet, George Washington University student publication, carried two two-column pictures of the Maryland mascot on its front page yesterday, and hinted strongly that it was on the G. W. campus.

The story more or less confirmed the suspicions of Maryland students. After the statue was pilfered last September 9, it was believed "borrowed" by the University of Richmond or Delaware, the Terps' first two football opponents.

Now the Terps believe G. W. is the offender as the Colonials-Terps game of this Saturday at Griffith Stadium draws near. Since last Wednesday, Maryland students, have been discovered loitering around the G. W. campus, and even conducted a friendly but fruitless search of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity house.

While these student activities were taking place, the Maryland football team held its usual scrimmage yesterday, and G. W. held its usual two.

The Terps bumped heads with their freshman team, schooled in G. W.'s plays by Bill Meek, Jim Meade and Al Woods, who've scouted the Colonials. The bumping was rather violent, for it produced a broken nose for Matt Stankiewitz, reserve guard of the varsity, and a dislocated knee for Rip O'Donnell, freshman center.

Meanwhile, the Colonials worked hard against the plays of Maryland, G. W.'s sixth straight T-formation opponent. And between their two drills they were looking at National Collegiate Athletic Bureau statistics, which revealed that Andy Davis, their No. 1 back, is No. 5 in the Nation in total offense.

Davis only completed 5 out of 13 passes against Kansas last Friday, but he picked up 74 yards on the ground to give him 124 for the day. He has accounted for 633. Andy is fifteenth among the Nation's passers with 29 completed out of 60 thrown for three touchdowns and 428 yards.

Other Coaches Catch On

Leahy Gives Boys Double Cross On T by Using 2 Quarterbacks

By Red Smith

New York, Oct. 19.—Purdue was scaring the silk pants off Notre Dame a few Saturdays ago when Frank Leahy, the grand old man of football, made a change in the Irish backfield.

The G.O.M. of F. withdrew his fullback from the game and sent in a young man named Bob Williams. Only Williams didn't play fullback.

Apparently unaware that a colleague named Frank Tripucka was also on the field, and that Tripucka is also a quarterback, Williams trotted on past the fullback's normal position and snuggled up against the center's hindquarters in the orthodox crouch of the T-formation quarterback.

Tripucka, however, stood on his seniority rights and declined to yield the position. He cuddled behind the center, too, cheek-to-cheek with Williams, and both of them thrust their paws forward to receive the snapback.

It is not recorded what thoughts went through Purdue heads at that moment. Perhaps Stu Holcomb's delegates know that Williams was a sophomore and comparative stranger at Notre Dame and figured he just hadn't had time to learn his way around in the backfield.

Maybe some were aware that Williams hopes to grow up to be a sports writer, which would explain his confusion readily enough.

Anyhow, the ball was snapped and the two quarterbacks spun toward each other, turning their taffrails to the line and scampering 5 yards back, shoulder-to-shoulder.

The Purdues, being bright young men, reasoned that one of 'em must have the ball, but which? Before the question was resolved, Notre Dame completed a pass.

The Irish lined up again in the same peculiar formation. Again the quarterbacks spun and darted back, both acting like men possessed of a guilty secret. One of 'em faked a pass, the other palmed the ball off to a halfback, who bolted past a bewildered Purdue tackle.

Using two quarterbacks and no fullback, Notre Dame ran off a sequence of plays for a first down, then reverted to the orthodox T-formation. In due course, the Irish won the ball game.

There was no reference to these diverting pranks in the news accounts of the game which reached attention here.

Several days later, a reporter saw a description of the formation in a scouting report and gave it a paragraph or so in his column. The scouts had picked it up, and now the whole coaching fraternity has heard about it. It has a name, too—The doublecross T. Copyright, 1948, N. Y. Herald Tribune

Winless Lions Play 2-2 Tie With Hershey

Both the Hershey Bears and the Washington Lions snapped three-game losing streaks without breaking into the winning column by tying each other, 2-2, last night at Uline Arena before 2281 spectators.

Frank Porteous collaborated with his twin brother Dan and the other member of their line, Larry Archambeault to score at seven minutes in the third period and deadlock the game. The Bears had led since the last minutes of the second period when Dave Creighton ricocheted the puck off Lew Crowdis' ankle into the cage.

The Lions roared early. At 1:26 in the first period Win Mousseau moved down right side of the ice, fending off defensemen with his one free hand and dribbling the puck with the other. At 15 feet out, Mousseau slowed up, and rammed the puck into the opposite corner of the net.

Opportunity fairly shouted at the Lions after a third of the period had gone. Marquess and Jones were cooling off in the penalty box, giving Washington a five to three advantage, but aside from a few well-coordinated sorties into Bear ice, they couldn't capitalize.

Then Hershey's Frank Mario set up a nice play, passing out to the left where Roly McLenahan was waiting to drive the puck home for the tying goal.

The second period was a defensive battle until the Bears went ahead at 17:34. Toppazzini, trapped in the corner, got the puck out to Rookie Dave Creighton almost on top of Crowdis. The Lion defensemen were somewhere else and the puck was in the net before Crowdis could get set.

Mrs. Walsh, T. J. Broyhill Win Golf Match

Mrs. W. A. Walsh and T. J. Broyhill of the home club won the low net in the District Golf Association mixed Scotch foursome played yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club. Their score was 83—14—69.

Mrs. L. B. Platt and Ralph Bogart of Chevy Chase had the low gross score, a 74.

The next four low net scores were all 72s. They were brought in by Mrs. R. H. Rife, Washington, and A. Sherrier, Prince Georges, 87—15; Mrs. P. Barifoot and Lew Swartwout, Washington, 88—16; Mr. and Mrs. E. X. Murphy, Washington, 87—15; Mrs. H. Lacey and N. S. Horne, Washington, 86—14.

Mrs. Betty Meckley and Don Miller of Kenwood had a 78 for second low gross.

Kansas Star Breaks Jaw In GW Game

Lawrence, Kans., Oct. 19 (AP).—The University of Kansas football team will be without the services of Cocaptain Frank Pattee for the next three weeks.

Coach J. W. Sikes said today the regular left halfback of the KU team suffered a broken jaw in the George Washington game last Friday night. The extent of the injury was not disclosed until X-rays were taken upon the return of the team from Washington. Pattee is the Jayhawkers' chief ground gainer.

Gene Bearden's Family Runs Into Tough Luck

Popular Bluff, Mo., Oct. 19 (AP).—The family of Gene Bearden, the Cleveland Indian's pitcher, has hit a chain of misfortune.

First, Gene's father, Henry, contracted pneumonia watching Gene pitch in the final game of the World Series with the Boston Braves.

Next, Gene's 20-month-old son, Shea, became ill and had to be taken to the same hospital his grandfather is a patient.

Last night the apartment building where the Beardens live was badly damaged by fire. The pitcher's mother was taken to the hospital for treatment of shock.

Being Nice Guy May Cost 49ers Star Back

San Francisco, Oct. 19 (AP).—Tony Morabito, owner of the San Francisco 49'ers, is moaning that it doesn't pay to be a nice guy.

About a year ago, Morabito heard about a terrific back named Stan Heath at Nevada, whose class had been graduated but who hadn't appeared on the draft lists. Morabito got Heath on the phone and made him an offer. Inside of an hour, Nevada Coach Joe Sheeketski called to explain that the boy had another year's eligibility and the Nevada team would be wrecked without him.

So Morabito withdrew the offer. This year Heath is only the Nation's leading ground-gainer; everybody knows all about him and San Francisco probably will have the last choice in the All-America Conference draft.

Questions About His Age Don't Worry Satch

Los Angeles, Oct. 19 (AP).—Satch Paige, Cleveland's venerable twirler, just won't be pinned down on his age. But he's certainly not worried about it.

While giving local sportswriters the verbal runaround at luncheon yesterday, Satch admitted that Gene Bearden once said to him:

"Tell me confidentially, Satch—how did you pitch to Connie Mack?"

Bad Back Ends Fonville's Career

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 19 (AP).—Physicians at University of Michigan Hospital today wrote finis to the brilliant collegiate athletic career of Charley Fonville, world's record holder in the shotput.

After observing the gangling Negro record breaker for a month, the specialists said Fonville was suffering a fused vertebra in his back. They ordered him to prepare for a four-to-six-week stay in the hospital, during which time a delicate operation would be performed to correct the condition.

Jockey Suspended

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Jamaica track stewards today suspended Apprentice Richard Rozelle for 20 days, effective tomorrow, for rough riding astride Lex in yesterday's sixth race.

Baksi, Savold Or Charles Fights Him In Stadium

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Joe Louis changed his mind again today and said he will defend his heavyweight championship again next June.

The Brown Bomber said "definitely" when he announced his decision to newsmen this afternoon. First he had connferred with Mike Jacobs, president of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, and Harry Marmson, recently appointed managing director of the fight promotional outfit.

The site will be Yankee Stadium and the opponent likely will be either Ezzard Charles, Joe Baksi or Lee Savold.

Louis' decision to "unretire" failed to startle anybody. The champ had been wavering for some time.

He Makes It Definite

It was right after he flattened Jersey Joe Walcott in the eleventh round at Yankee Stadium last June 25, that he said over the radio:

"For my mother—this is for her—tonight was my last fight."

Since then Joe has been hedging back and forth all over the country.

The first solid indication that he intended to defend his crown for the twenty-sixth time came September 14.

Speaking at the annual dinner of the National Boxing Association in Philadelphia, the champ said he would take the full six months to make up his mind about retiring. The NBA allows champions a half year grace between title fights.

Three days later he declared he might return and fight the winner of the Baksi-Charles fight.

Today he committed himself.

"I'm going to give the Joe Baksi-Ezzard Charles fight December 10 (in Madison Square Garden) the once-over and if it looks good I will fight the winner," the 34-year-old champ said. "If nothing comes out of that I might take on Lee Savold who's pulling a good comeback."

Jacobs Beams

Jacobs, still convalescing from a stroke suffered December 3, 1946, beamed all over his office.

"I haven't any idea who Joe is going to fight right now," Jacobs said. "The main thing is that he's going to fight again."

Jacobs had the right to glow. With Louis ready to fight for him again, it gives him a very big edge over the rival Tournament of Champions in the boxing promotional field.

The champ looked very fit. He said he weighs 220, which is just 6½ pounds over what he scaled the night he finally caught up with the evasive Walcott.

One reason for the Bomber's fine condition is a number of exhibitions he's fought recently as well as daily visits to the golf course.

Starting October 28, he embarks on an exhibition tour of 13 cities. That will bring him plenty of ready cash as well as serve to loosen him up for full scale training later on.

Canisius Defeats Niagara, 19 to 0

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 19 (AP).—Howie Willis, 155-pound halfback, led Canisius to a 19-0 football victory tonight over a traditional rival, Niagara, on a sloppy Civic Stadium gridiron.

Willis ran for two touchdogwns, passed for another and kicked an extra point. A sparse 6274 watched the Griffins take their victory over Niagara.

Oxon Hill Booters Win

Crisler Keeps Lead as Best Pass Catcher

Special to The Post

Philadelphia, Oct. 19.—Harold Crisler, towering wingman of the Washington Redskins, caught only three passes for a total of 19 yards in his team's 45-0 beating by Philadelphia Sunday, but the effort was good enough to retain leadership in the aerial receiving department of the National Football League statistics.

Crisler, purchased from the Boston Yanks just before the season opened, brought his total to 18 catches in four games, good for 269 yards and three touchdowns.

Only one other Washington player—Slingin' Sammy Baugh—rates as high as fourth in individual standings. Baugh stands behind Tommy Thompson of Philadelphia, Ray Mallouf of the Cardinals, and Sid Luckman of the Bears in the passing department.

He completed 11 of 22 tosses Sunday, good for 116 yards, to give himself 58 per cent of completions for the season.

The most improvement was shown by the New York Giants' Charley Conerly, who jumped into fifth place as a result of tossing 18 successful passes in 31 attempts for 247 yards and four touchdowns against the Cardinals.

Tony Canadeo of Green Bay returned to first place among the ball-carriers after a week's absence with 303 yards gained. He took the place of Johnny Clement, Pittsburgh ace who dropped to second. Steve Van Buren, last year's record-breaker, moved from tenth to sixth with his work against the Redskins, picking up 91 yards in 24 trips with the ball.

Joe Muha continues to lead the punters with an average of 48.7 yards per punt. Mal Kutner of the Chicago Cardinals leads the scorers with 30 points, George McAfee of the Bears heads the punt return leaders, and Joe Marguccl paces the kickoff returns leaders.

Coyote Takes Early Lead, Wins by Nose

Favorite Loses Duel At Laurel

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 19.—Coyote, a so nof Case Ace, who has shown quitting tendencies in recent races, held on like a bulldog here this afternoon. His courage earned him a nose-photo decision over the favorite, George Thorn's Superb Donna, in the featured The Hyattsville.

It was a head-and-head, dog-eat-dog battle that began on the backstretch and carried right into the wire.

Dutel Takes Third

Third money in the field of seven fair 3-year-olds going six furlongs was garnered by S. W. Labrot jr.'s Dutel.

Sporting the colors of Mrs. S. G. Steckler, Coyote was a $13.40 shot and was timed in 1:13 2-5 on a track that improved steadily as the program progressed. Coyote was expertly handled by Jockey Bobby Strange.

Coyote bounded to the front when Starter Eddie Blind sent the field away. However, Red Howell soon rushed Superb Donna up on the inside and the battle was on. They raced as a team, well out in front of the others. Going into the finish line, Coyote seemed to find an extra ounce of speed that decided the issue.

Blanket Finish in First

Both shortshot and longshot players had their innings during the beautiful day at the races.

The program opened mild enough with C. E. Nelson's Kingrosa, a nice-looking daughter of the up-and-coming sire Alaking, surviving three-way photo finish to return $5.80 to her backers.

Mrs. J. Y. Christmas' Rough Cloud followed with a $25.60 victory in the second race while handled by Apprentice Willie Downs, a Charles Town graduate. Those who played the 5 and 9 combination in the double collected $111.40 for the popular $2 investment.

The day's steeplechase, usually a formful affair, supplied a monetary punch today. F. Ambrose Clark's Scuttleman, beaten far off in a previous New York start, was nimble of fleet and limb for the 13-jump affair and scampered home at a $46.60 win payoff.

Jockey Field Hurt

Mrs. C. E. Adams' Gift of Gold, who alternated in setting and forcing the pace with the winner, was second. Third money went to C. Mahlon Kline's New Puzzle, half of the Trainer Morris Dixon entry. Scuttleman, ridden by Jockey B. Ansteatt, was clocked in 4:10 4-5 over the slightly soggy course.

Jockey Ken Field suffered a sprained ankle when he fell with Martin Vogel, jr.'s Demas. G. H. Bostwick's Uncle Sam also crashed his way out of competition.

Sergt. Peace, in the colors of the Oak Spring Stable, was the favorite but faded after showing some early foot.

Saints Underrated

'Breathers' May Backfire On W & M

Richmond, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—It looked like a sure bet today that at least one of those two 'breathers" William and Mary's Indians were supposed to have before November 5 isn't going to prove such a pushover, after all.

November 6, of course, is the day all of Coach Rube McCray's Tribesmen are pointing for. That day, at Chapel Hill, N. C., the Indians get a crack at North Carolina's Tar Heels.

So when St. Bonaventure and the University of Richmond popped up on the William and Mary schedule as the foes for October 23 and October 30, there was a lot of talk that the Indians had planned it that way in order to conserve their energy for the mighty Carolinians.

Today it grew more and more apparent that the Braves could expect more than a minimum of trouble from the Saints.

The most incontrovertible proof came week before last, when the Saints from Olean, N. Y., played to an astonishing 7-7 tie with Boston College. Only a week later Boston College had polished off Wake Forest, which, as everybody remembers, handed William and Mary a licking on October 2.

St. Bonaventure, coached by Hugh Devore, has yet to be beaten. They edged Dayton, 7-6, in their opener and trounced Wayne University of Detroit, 13-0, last weekend and McCray isn't taking the game lightly.

Kid Fights Rossano at Uline Arena

Kid Gavilan's next fight may be for Ray Robinson's welterweight title if he gets by Vinnie Rossano succesfully Thursday night at Uline Arena.

When the Cuban Kid lost a close one to Robinson recently in a non-title fight, he came away with a commitment from Sugar Ray for the title shot.

Robinson had failed to make a specified weight and was to have forfeited $5000. Instead of taking the money, Angelo Lopez, the Kid's manager, accepted a shot at the Sweet One's welterweight crown.

Gavilan will have to prove he's headline talent in the 10 rounder tomorrow, though, to back up his demands for a Robinson fight. Although he's a two-to-one favorite, he should have his hands full with Rossano, a Brooklyn toughie who'll be out to restore the family pride.

Several months ago, Gavilan sent the Rossano stock plummeting by knocking out Vince's kid brother Rocco in 35 seconds.

Both have been looking sharp in training and both own a Sunday wallop. Rossano will have the added advantage of Whitey Bimstein's presence in his corner.

The supporting bouts consist of Foseng Safora against Clev Simmons, and Jackie Ford against Bucky Slocum, all featherweights, in six-rounders; Rufus Barry against Joe Flood, heavyweights, and Norval Gaddis against King David, middleweights, in four-rounders.

Referees Here Sunday

Heft Makes Big-Time Debut But It's Not One He Expected

ARNOLD HEFT makes his big league debut Sunday, but scarcely as he expected to 10 years ago.

Back in 1938, at the age of 18, he was a starting pitcher for the Baltimore Orioles, and considered one of the most promising lefthanders in the minors.

On Sunday, in his first assignment as a Basketball Association of America referee, he'll officiate the Washington Capitols-New York Knickerbockers game at Uline Arena.

That game is the nightcap of the Touchdown Club-sponsored doubleheader which opens with the Baltimore Bullets playing the Philadelphia Warriors.

The story of how his path changed from active participation in one sport to officiating in another covers 16 years.

Arnold's ambition to become a big league baseball player began back in 1932 when he was hauling bats and running errands for the Nats' visiting teams at Griffith Stadium.

Four years later, Arnold was the best southpaw hurler in the District high schools, even though he weighed less than 120 pounds. He had zip on his fast ball, and a snap to his curve.

His poise prompted Eddie Rommel, one-time A's hurler, to tout him as the best young pitching prospect of 1936. Rommel was umpiring high school and college games then. He's one of the American League's top arbiters now.

BY 1938, Arnold was pitching for the Orioles. He drifted into the Red Sox organization in 1941, and after winning 25 games in the Kitty League, was tabbed for spring delivery to Scranton, along with Sam Dente, Al Kozar and Mickey Harris.

'A week before he was to report, Arnold shattered his pitching wrist in a shipyard accident (he was working at a Baltimore drydock during the off-season in an effort to put weight on his 145-pound frame), and his baseball career ended abruptly.

He turned to basketball officiating in 1943, and his rise in that field has been meteoric. He worked boys' club games under Curley White in '43. In '44 and '45, he was in the Navy, and refereed intercamp games. In early '46, he worked his first high school game, and later that season, his first college game.

That latter game, gave him his first break. It was a V.P.I.-George Washington game, won by G. W. Coach Gummy Proctor of the losing team was so impressed with Arnold's ability to keep up with the ball, that he had him assigned to the Southern Conference tournament. Arnold's been a fixture in that tourney since then.

Last year, he was accepted into the Eastern Intercollegiate Association fold and last week into the Basketball Association.

The whole tale has an ironical twist. Arnold now weighs 180 pounds. If he'd been that big back in 1938, he would have probably had his shot at big league baseball. But he's satisfied "I have my first test Sunday, and if I pass it and a few others I'll have achieved my ambition to become a big leaguer."

Moore Fights Here Monday

Archie Moore, one of the best light-heavyweights in the game will be the headliner on next Monday night's boxing show at Turner's Arena.

Signed to fight the hard-smashing St. Louis scrapper is Lloyd Gibson, young Cincinnati stablemate of Ezzard Charles. The distance is ten rounds.

Moore has a lifetime record of about 50 knockouts, and has beaten most of the good light-heavies around today, including Jimmy Bivins, who he flattened in nine rounds last year and beat again in the same Baltimore ring a few months ago.

Schweigert Will Wrestle McCoy

Dutch Schweigert, a 24-year-old babe in the wrestling woods who recently retired from the strenuous calling of a football player, will get the Bibber McCoy treatment in the feature tonight at Uline Arena.

Wilbur Nead, whohas defied the law of wrestling averages in going undefeated in 95 matches, goes against Joe Kamaroff. Kenny Ackler and Chick Garibaldi meet Tony Verdi and Jesse James in a two-man bout, and Harry Armus leads off against Johnny Gallagher.

1949 Junior Golf May Be Played Here

The 1949 national junior golf championship will be played in Washington next August if plans under consideration by the District Golf Association can be ironed out.

Since several weeks ago when the USGA first approached Washington on the subject, DGA officials have been laying the groundwork for formal acceptance of the tournament.

Biggest stumbling block so far has been the lack of a course. Georgetown University has generously come forth with an offer of housing facilities for the youngsters who'll participate, to solve the other large problem involved in holding the National Junior.

In order to ease the transportation burden, DGA officials have been trying to find a course within a reasonable distance of Georgetown.

A few clubs have been approached and are checking their calendars for any conflicts in dates. The Chevy Chase Club, considered ideal as far as location goes, is one of them and may decide this week whether it can accept the tournament.

Tebbetts' Stars Win

Waterville, Me., Oct. 19 (AP).—Birdie Tebbetts' All Stars, paced by Tony Lupien of the Chicago White Sox, walloped Colby College, 15 to 5 before 1800 blanket-robed fans on chilly Seaverns Field today.

C. U. Gets Stars Back

Catholic University will regain three injured regulars for Saturday's homecoming game with Johns Hopkins.

Fullback Bill DeYoung, Tackle Harry Amadio and End Jack Samperton, all of whom have been nursing ailing legs, reported for duty yesterday. Samperton got in for one play against Randolph-Macon, attempting an extra point kick that missed. The others rode the bench.

DeYoung's return will be welcomed not only for his offensive power but for his line-backing ability as well. Amadio should help plug a line that needed more more starch against Randolph-Macon, while Samperton, in addition to his place-kicking, is a good pass-catcher and defensive wingman.

Coach Tom Chisari is emphasizing offense in practice this week. He turned up a good passing attack against the Yellow Jackets, with Bill Maher and Russ Johnson on the end of most Joe Mauiri's throws.

Daily Double Returns To New York in '49

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—The daily double, absent from New York race tracks for the past three years, will be returned with the start of the 1949 season, it was announced today.

Hoyas Are 2d in Pass Defense, Terps 4th in Rushing Offense

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Georgetown University, beaten twice in three games, can't put the blame on incompetent pass defense. The Hoyas rank second in the Nation in that department, statistics revealed today.

These same figures show that the University of Maryland hasn't missed the daring dashes of Lu Gambino as much as expected. The Terrapins, winners of three out of four games, rank fourth across the country in rushing offense.

All told, Boston College, Holy Cross and Tulsa tried 33 passes against the Hoyas, and completed only 11 for 122 yards. Only Brown has a better average with 129 yards gained against it in four games.

Maryland has averaged 309.3 yards gained on the ground for each of its first four games. The Terps have rushed the ball 202 times for 1737 yards. But they're in no immediate danger of taking the lead.

The University of Nevada, generally overlooked in the ranking of major football powers, leads in total offense with a chance for an all-time record.

The combination of a powerful team and a none-too-potent schedule has resulted in an average total gain by rushing and passing of 503.5 yards for each of its first four games.

The great 1945 Army array with Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis setting the pace, holds the record of 462.7 yards per game for the entire season. No team has averaged better than 500 yards per game for as many as four games.

Nevada, winners over San Jose, San Francisco, North Texas State and St. Mary's, had five more games to play starting with Tulsa this weekend. Unless some of the Wolf Pack's foes find a defense for the passing of Stan Heath, the record books are due for a thorough revision.

Nevada is tied with Southern Methodist and Kansas for most touchdown passes. Each has 10. However, S. M. U. has the best percentage of completions with 68.3 or 41 of 60. Notre Dame is the only other team over the 60 per cent level with 32 for 49.

Wyoming's team leads the major scorers with 169 points followed in order by California 164, Lafayette 162, Nevada 161 and Santa Clara 158.

The 10 leaders in each department:
Total offense—Nevada, 503.5 yards average per game; Miami (Ohio), 429.5; Wyoming, 419.5; California, 416.4; Notre Dame, 402; Maryland, 398; Army, 392; Fordham, 391.3; Texas Mines, 386; Oklahoma, 367.5.
Rushing offense—Army, 351.3 yards average per game; Texas Mines, 348.5; Notre Dame, 318.8; Maryland, 309.3; Wyoming, 304.5; California, 298.6; Michigan State, 291.3; Oklahoma, 285; Detroit, 279; Cornell, 270.3.
Passing offense—Nevada, 276 yards average per game; Georgia Tech, 201.3; Miami, 182.3; William and Mary, 175.8; West Virginia, 174.6; Southern Methodist, 170.3; San Francisco, 163.5; Tulsa, 159.8; Pittsburgh, 159; Columbia, 158.3.

Indian Series Share $6772

Cincinnati, Oct. 19 (AP).—A record-breaking $6772.07 for each member of the Champion Cleveland Indians receiving a full share of the recent World Series money was announced today by Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler.

The former all-time high was $6544.76, and went to the Detroit Tigers in 1935.

Each full-share member of the Boston Braves, who lost to the Indians in the big play-off, 4 games to 2, will receive $4570.73.

Cleveland voted full shares to 30 players and Boston gave the full amount to 31 club members.

Marv Rickert, who joined the Boston team at the end of the regular season and played a fine game in left field in the series, was awarded $1523.58, by order of Commissioner Chandler.

The participants divided $383,750.49, of which $230,250.29 went to the world champs.

The Boston American League team, which finished second in the pennant race, divided $41,116.13 so that each full share amounted to $1191.71.

The National League second placers, St. Louis, divided the same pool so that each full share amounted to $1341.52.

The third place New York Yankees' full share amounted to $778.88, while the Brooklyn Dodgers, who ended in the same spot in the National loop, divided a total of $27,410.75 in such manner that each full share was $898.72.

Fourth-place Philadelphia in the American circuit got full cuts of $415.32, while the Pittsburgh Pirates took down $391.34 per full share after dividing up their share of the melon.

The World Champion Indians gave full shares of $6772.07 to the following players: Spud Goldstein, Leroy Paige, Sam Zoldak, Bob Kennedy, Mel Harder, Harold Ruel, Bill McKechnie, Max Weisman, Henry Beardon, Don Black, Louis Boudreau, Odell Beardon, Al Clark, Russ Christopher, Larry Doby, Henry Edwards, Bob Feller, Joe Gordon, Steve Gromek, James Hegan, Walter Judnich, Ken Keltner, Ed Klieman, Bob Lemon, Loren Mitchell, Bob Muncrief, Harry Peck, William Robinson, Joe Tipton and Thurman Tucker.

Half shares—Wally Boob, Frank Saylor, Ray Murray and Bill Lobe.

Quarter shares—Donald Dibremus, Bill Sheridan, Ray Boone and Al Rosen.

George Young was voted a three-quarter share and Al Lyons a half share.

Silas Johnson and Ray Sanders were given quarter shares.

Tommy Fergusson, Frank McNulty and Charles Cronopoulous each received $380.90.

Football Teams Play Benefit

The Anacostia Eagles and the Silver Spring Merchants, both of the unlimited division in the Metropolitan Amateur Football League, will play a benefit game next Sunday at 2:30 p. m. at the Montgomery-Blair High School Stadium in Silver Spring.

All proceeds, including admissions collected from the players themselves, will go to John Harrison, a Silver Spring Merchants player who sustained a dislocated hip in a game against the Eagles two weeks ago. Admission will be 50 cents.

350,000 See Legionnaires' Miami Parade

Miami, Fla., Oct. 19 (AP).—Veterans of two world wars thousands strong, changed midtown Miami into a riot of music, color and fun today as they marched with bands playing and banners flying in the hours-long American Legion parade.

State Police Capt. Tobe Bass estimated the watching throng at between 350,000 and 400,000.

Jet fighters, B-29s and a huge, six-engined B-36 roared low over the line of march.

Other than the parade, it was an off day for most of the Legionnaires. Committee meetings were numerous.

Another heavy session faces the convention Wednesday, with Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, Gov. Earl Warren of California, Republican vice-presidential candidate, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, scheduled to speak.

The convention will end Thursday with election of officers. Top candidates for national commander are World War II veteran James Green of Omaha and Perry Brown of Beaumont, Tex., a veteran of both World Wars.

Officers Nominated By Legion Auxiliary

The only contest developed over the presidency. The convention nominated Mrs. Hubert A. Goode, Portland, Oreg., and Mrs. Archie W. Miller, New Cumberland, Pa., for the highest office.

Mrs. William H. Heagerty, Washington, D. C., was nominated for the post of historian.

The election will be held Thursday.

Taxi Driver Freed in Crash Death Appeal

James E. Boehman, 37, cab driver, of 3416 41st ave., Colmar Manor, Md., was acquitted in Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro yesterday on charges of manslaughter and reckless driving.

Boehman was charged in connection with the death of Joseph Blue, 23, of 26 Channing st. nw., on February 29. Blue died as result of an automobile accident on Route 5, a mile south of Clinton, Md. A cab in which both were riding crashed into a telephone pole, then jumped the road and struck another pole.

Boehman had been convicted in Upper Marlboro Police Court and directed to pay a fine of $500 for manslaughter. A fine of $100 on the reckless driving charge was suspended. He appealed both to the Circuit Court.

Assistant State's Attorney Hervey G. Machen moved for dismissal of the case after Defense Attorney Edward C. Bell, jr., of Laurel, pointed out the State had not proved Boehman was driving and that Blue's crushed chest and skull indicated that Blue may have been the driver.

Postlude

Philadelphia Group Scores With Strauss

There are moments when I would trade all of Wagner and Johann Strauss for the score of "Der Rosenkavalier) by Richard Strauss.

Right now is one of those moments. The Philadelphia Orchestra wound up their first Washington concert of the season last night with an orchestral suite from the "Cavalier of the Rose." It was a great windup. The famous strings, the glorious oboe and brass, the new cellist, and the friendly conductor were all there. And having wound up, you should have heard them pitch!

The Viennese score melted an audience which had been pliable all evening. Shouts which followed the intoxicating operatic measures had been building up through a brilliant 1948 initiation. Bela Bartok preceded Strauss as we heard a suite from his mime-play, "The Miraculous Mandarin."

Written during Bartok's luxuriant period, before he turned to works which crowned his creative career (such as the violin and third piano concertos) the "Mandarin" music is exciting. The excitement may not last, but it is no less real for that.

The music does not seem to possess the same degree of independence of libretto as, for instance, Prokofieff's Scythian Suite. But its reflective moments have a unique and fascinating sound, and the opening section pronounces Bartok's theatrical writing to be as masterly as his taut and profound string quartets. The final chase (with the Mandarin pursuing and catching the young girl) is one of the best races in music.

Preintermission scores came from Bach and Sibelius. Eugene Zador's new transcription of the relatively unfamiliar F Minor Prelude and Fugue is successful as these things go. If sudden smashes and long rolls on the kettle drums could be omitted, and the strings driven a bit less, the effect would be vastly improved. The fugue subject is well stated through most of the contrapuntal section of the work, and the prelude has a noble sound after the opening measures.

In the fifth symphony of Sibelius, Ormandy delivered one of the best performances of any work that we have heard from him. The long ascent to the first climax was soundly constructed, and the folk motion of ensuing passages possessed a charming lilt. The two final movements were well paced, and the whole a rousing triumph. Here, as in the complex intricacies of Bartok's score, Ormandy was a thorough master of music and orchestra. He deserved a large share of the enthusiasm which he and his players engendered. We are happy to have the Philadelphians with us again.

Not the least of the orchestra's more recent acquisitions is a new author for its program notes. Donald Engle, formerly of The Washington Post, is now handling notes and publicity for the visiting orchestra to our genuine satisfaction

Hey KIDS! Write a RADIO SLOGAN
Win up to $100 and be on the RADIO!

It's The Washington Post
SAINT MYSTERY COMIC SLOGAN CONTEST
Open to all grade school, junior high, and high school kids in the Washington area.
HERE'S WHAT YOU DO: First, begin by turning to the comic pages of The Post and get acquainted with "The Saint." Next, decide what you want to say about this new mystery comic. Then say it—in a slogan, a jingle, what have you. With or without sound effects indicated—it doesn't matter.
Finally, write your slogan on a piece of paper, put on your name, address, age and school and send it to the "Saint Mystery Comic" Contest Editor, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. You may enter as many slogan ideas as you wish. Be sure your name and address are on each one.
The contest lasts until October 31. Entries received after October 31 will not even be opened. So get going—now. Read the Saint Comic in The Washington Post. Put on your thinking cap. Try your idea out on your family. Then send it in. In case two or more persons send in the same slogan, the one reaching the judges first will be considered original, so it pays to get your ideas in right away.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Democrats Accused Of Coercive Attempt To Collect Donations

The Democrats yesterday were accused of a "brazen attempt to sandbag" civil service employes into contributing money for President Truman's reelection campaign.

Herbert Brownell, GOP campaign manager, based his charge on a letter written to a Federal worker here by Aaron L. Ford, chairman of the Democrats' Radio Time Committee. The letter, he said, reached a new low in the political campaign.

One paragraph of the letter, Brownell said, "constitutes a very thinly veiled threat of reprisal against those who do not contribute." He quoted it as follows:

"Will not you, having enjoyed the opportunities of the Democratic Administration, help keep it in office by making a liberal contribution for the President to continue a limited number of radio broadcasts?"

The GOP campaign manager commented that the "whole sordid episode is additional evidence of what can happen when the ethics of the Pendergast machine becomes dominant in Washington."

The Republicans supplied photostats of the Ford letter which had been addressed to an employe here. The letter pointed out that radio time was expensive and the President's recent Philadelphia speech had been cut off from the radio because of the lack of funds. A committee spokesman said he understood that similar letters had been sent to many Federal workers.

The controversy over the letter makes it appropriate to review what Federal workers can and can't do under the Hatch "no-politics" act. They can voluntarily contribute to a political party, and they can be solicited for funds outside of their offices. But it's illegal for them to be solicited for funds in Federal buildings, or for Federal workers to seek political funds at any place or any time.

THE HOOVER COMMISSION is slated to recommend the appointment of a career civil servant as an assistant secretary for administration in each Federal department. The "little cabinet" jobs would be under Civil Service and its occupants would not be subject to removal during a change of Administrations.

The plan under study would be modeled after the British system, which has a career undersecretary in each of its departments—a system that gives the agencies a continuity of administration no matter which party is in power. Apparently in anticipation of favorable action by the Hoover group, the Department of the Army is planning a reorganization which would give the Assistant Secretary control over the administration of that agency.

Treasury is one of the few agencies that has a top job under Civil Service—the Fiscal Assistant Secretary. That sub-Cabinet post is occupied by Edward F. Bartelt, a long-time career man.

POSTOFFICE: It will have a record deficit for this fiscal year—upward of 500 million dollars—despite an increase in some postal rates to be made effective as of January 1. Meantime, the department is doing a record business which is expected to exceed $1,600,000,000 this year.

Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson takes the position that the deficit can be wiped out only by the department being given the authority to charge higher prices for what it has to sell. And Congress has the full power to fix postal rates.

The department will spend $2,100,000,000 this fiscal year because everything it buys has leaped in price.

CIVIL SERVICE: And on the subject of higher salaries, James M. Mitchell, the new GOP Civil Service commissioner, yesterday said he would support higher salaries for top Federal officials. The Government, he said, must pay adequately for its public service.

"The lower salary levels, too," he said, "have failed to keep pace with the cost of living." He pointed out that many cities and one State—Minnesota—had tied their salaries to the cost of living in order to maintain the employes' purchasing power. Mitchell said he hadn't thought of a similar pay plan for Federal workers but he indicated he would look into it.

The 38-year-old official also said he would devote his efforts to build up and strengthen the career system—a system that will give the good employes protection in their jobs.

Action Urged To Halt Sale Of Liquor To Minors

Prince Georges Grand Jury Asks Severe Penalties For Violations

The Prince Georges County grand jury yesterday called for "vigorous" prosecution in cases involving liquor sales to minors.

The grand jury's report was presented to Circuit Court Judge Charles C. Marbury at Upper Marlboro.

"The grand jury feels," the report declared, "that the consumption of alcoholic beverages by minors is one of society's most serious present problems, frequently resulting in juvenile delinquency and crime."

Vigorous Prosecution Urged

Asserting such minor sales "should not be tolerated," the grand jury "urgently recommended" that all such violators "be vigorously prosecuted and severely dealt with."

The jury added that, after conviction, it felt liquor licenses should be either suspended for "substantial lengths of time, or in aggravated and proper cases, permanently revoked."

Joseph S. Haas was foreman of the jury, completing its 12-day October session.

"The county police force, the report said, "appears to be doing an efficient and satisfactory job of law enforcement, with possibly a somewhat limited personnel." It also urges emphasis on apprehension of violators of the laws prohibiting gambling.

Would Curb Expenditures

Pointing to the current demands for more schools, the jury said that it felt "the present is no time for the expenditure of any public funds other than what is absolutely necessary for the maintenance of reasonably good county government."

The jury investigated 176 cases involving alleged violation of the criminal law and returned 137 indictments, ignored 27 cases, and continued 12 for further investigation.

Citizen Group Opposes New Theater Plan

Proposed erection of a theater for stage plays at Newark and Wisconsin aves. nw. was opposed last night by the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association.

Members of the association, meeting in Guild Hall at Wisconsin and Massachusetts aves. nw., also adopted unanimously a resolution calling for the reappointment of James P. Flanagan to the District Public Utilities Commission.

Elected were the following officers: E. L. Florence, recording secretary and treasurer, and Florence L. Gourley, attorney, delegate to the Northwest Council.

Anacostia Citizens

Dr. Samuel O. Burdette was elected president of the Anacostia Citizens Association last night at a meeting held at the YMCA, 17th st. and Good Hope rd. se.

Other officers elected were Mrs. Carle G. Smith, first vice president; William F. Yearwood, second vice president; Emery Weightman, third vice president; Miss Dorothy Tucker, secretary, and Harry Seller, treasurer.

Mrs. Smith and Norris Perry were elected delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Mrs. Smith, Perry and Dr. Burdette as delegates to the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations.

Brookland Civic

The Brookland Civic Association met last night at the Lucy D. Slowe School, 14th and Jackson sts. ne. The following officers were elected:

C. Anthony McCain, president; Samuel Howard, vice president; Mrs. Grace Willis, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Angela Hayes, recording secretary; Mrs. John H. Curtis, treasurer, and Dr. William T. Grady, publicity secretary.

Delegates elected to the Federation were Austin J. Ficklin, Samuel Howard, Dr. William T. Grady and Dr. Walter M. Brooker. Alternates are Felix Payne, Capt. Herman Richards, H. M. Griffin and Mr. and Mrs. C. C. House.

GOP Club Favors School Bond Issue For Arlington

The Arlington County Republican Club has indorsed the school board's proposed $4,750,000 bond issue, and commended County Board Candidate I. Lee Potter for his "positive stand" in favor of the issue.

Potter is the only candidate to openly approve the bond issue, which will be voted on November 2.

During its meeting Monday night in the Cherrydale Firemen's Hall, 3900 Lee hwy., the club voted to oppose changing the date of school board elections from November to May. About 30 persons attended the meeting.

Falls Church Budget Would Boost Tax 30c

Estimated Costs For 10 Months Up $49,000 Over '48

An increased tax levy of 30 cents on real and personal property is proposed in a budget for the current fiscal year, submitted to Falls Church City Council last night.

The new budget is the first considered since Falls Church became a city in August. It covers only the period from September 1, 1948, to June 30, 1949, because of a change in the end of the city's fiscal year.

The Council will meet again Friday night to approve or disapprove the budgetary proposal.

The current tax levy will be increased by 25 cents to care for added operational expenses. Another five-cent increase will provide for additional fire protection.

$49,000 Over $48 Costs

The proposed budget, as submitted by City Manager Roy F. Dunn, includes estimated expenditures of $265,485.87 for the total cost of general government. This is an increase of $49,859.71 over actual expenditures of $215,626.16 for the fiscal year ended August 31, 1948.

The increased fire protection levy from 10 to 15 cents also is not prohibited by State law, he said.

Phoebus Lawyer Gets Findings in Inspection Case

Findings and a recommended decision on charges against District Building Inspector William M. Phoebus were turned over to his attorney, John B. Diamond 3d, yesterday in the District Building by Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner.

General Young said this was done on the advice of the corporation counsel's office to give Phoebus "every opportunity" to submit evidence.

After the papers are returned with comment by Phoebus, General Young will present a recommendation to his fellow Commissioners for final action on the matter.

Phoebus, who has been in the District government service for 22 years, has been charged with submitting false reports on inspections. He is on annual leave pending disposition of the case.

Major Aron to Speak

Major Wellesley Aron, who served with the Jewish Brigade under the British Eighth Army during World War II, will be guest speaker at a meeting of the Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation tonight at 8:30 p. m. in the vestry of the Temple, 8th and I sts. nw.

D. C. Traffic Court Shares U. S. Honors

Washington has tied with Milwaukee for the best traffic court among American cities with a population of more than 500,000, the American Bar Association has notified Municipal Court authorities.

The District's traffic court won recognition in a vote taken recently in Seattle, Wash., by the Bar Association's conference on traffic court judges and prosecutors.

The local court was cited for its efficient presentation and disposition of cases, adequate courtroom facilities, use of one judge at a time in traffic cases so that the judge hears only traffic cases during his court day, and cooperation with the citizenry.

The Bar Association said that a suitable award and certificate will commemorate the citation.

When notified of the award, Chief Judge George P. Barse of the Municipal Court said:

"I am tremendously gratified. I think Washington does have one of the best traffic courts in the Nation."

Nine Warships To Be on View Here on Navy Day

Eight Navy vessels will be open to the public at the Naval Gun Factory here and one vessel at the Navy Torpedo Plant, Alexandria, on Navy Day, October 27.

In its annual "open house," the Navy will show nearly 350 ships to the American public in Pacific and Eastern ports, as well as Hawaii.

District residents will see the destroyer Warrington (DD843); three tank landing craft, LCT 600, LCT 524, LCT 599; a medium-size landing craft, LSM 297, and two patrol boats, PCE (C) 873 and PC (C) 1168. Alexandria visitors will board the destroyer R. L. Wilson (DD 847).

Baptist Evangelistic Services Draw 21,369

Evangelistic services at 20 Baptist churches last week drew a total attendance of 21,369 persons, it was reported yesterday.

The Rev. Frank Brasington, director of the missions department of the D. C. Baptist Convention, presented the figures at a breakfast for Baptist ministers at Petworth Baptist Church, 7th and Randolph sts. nw. He said that during the period 10,958 persons were visited in a home-evangelism program. The city-wide drive will be concluded October 24.

Infant Girl's Body Found In Trash Can

Baby Strangled Soon After Birth, Coroner Reports

The body of an infant girl, strangled several hours after birth, was found yesterday at about 12:30 p. m. in a trash can in the 3100 block of Hiatt pl. nw.

After an autopsy, Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, said the infant died from asphyxia resulting from strangulation.

He said the baby had been strangled with a length of old, tape-like cloth, which perhaps had been the hem of a dress or the belt of a house dress.

Homicide squad detectives went to work after Dr. Rosenberg ruled it definitely was a case of infanticide.

Dr. Rosenberg said the infant was killed within a "few hours" of its birth, and had been dead less than 24 hours when found. The baby had not been fed, he added, and the umbilical cord, about 20 inches long, had not been tied.

Dr. Rosenberg said the baby weighed 8 pounds, was well formed and had blond hair and blue eyes.

The infant's body was found by Lee Johnson of 1204 O st. nw., an employe on a District trash collection truck. The body had been wrapped in a newspaper dated October 15, and lay on top of the trash can.

The can in which the body had been thrown is on the east side of the street, directly across from Powell Junior High School, which is now being used as the Bell Vocational High School. The school is attended only by boys. There are no houses on the side of the street with the trash can.

ABC Board Revokes Sinclair's License

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday revoked the Retail Class C license of Douglas Gordon Sinclair for a restaurant at 1504 14th st. nw.

The establishment's facilities were removed, but the license was not turned in, ABC was told. The board will hear similar charges against Moy Dick Kon, 910 E st. nw., on Thursday at 10 a. m.

Charges of sale to a minor against Bernard and Lillian Gorland, 628 4th st. sw., will be heard by the board today at 10 a. m.

Public Budget Hearing Set for Thursday

The District Commissioners will hold a public hearing at 10 a. m. Thursday in the District Building board room on the departmental budget requests for fiscal year 1950, which begins July 1, 1949.

More than 20 groups have requested time to discuss the estimates and the final list is expected to reach 30, according to Geoffrey M. Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners.

Police Catch Holdup Men In Va. Chase

Robbery, Kidnaping Laid to Fugitives After Pursuit at 85 Miles an Hour

In an 85-mile-an-hour chase, Virginia State Police yesterday captured two men on U. S. Route 1, not many hours after they allegedly held up two places and kidnaped a gas station attendant.

The car in which the men tried to escape was overtaken about five miles south of Alexandria. The driver was forced to reduce speed near the Mount Vernon School a school bus stopped.

The men, arrested at about 8:45 a. m., were identified by police as Vincent A. Hubbard, 31, a bus driver, and Alfred D. Woodle, 29, a butcher, both of Richmond.

State police said the pair admitted the holdup and kidnaping of Earl Haynes, 19, attendant at a Falmouth, Va., filling station, about 2 a. m.

Haynes told State Police he was robbed of $124 at gunpoint, then forced into the bandits' car. He said he was in the car a short time later when his kidnapers held up the Oak Hill Tourist Camp, 14 miles from Falmouth, and escaped with $52.

Haynes said his captors let him out of th ecar several hours later near Fort Belvoir, and warned him they would shoot him if he notified police. Haynes walked several miles, then caught a bus back to Fredericksburg, which is across the river from Falmouth, where he reported his experience.

State troopers sighted a car that tallied with the description given by Haynes while crusing just south of Alexandria and gave chase.

The two cars roared along at speeds as high as 85 miles before the capture, the officers said. They reported Woodle had a .38-caliber revolver tucked in his belt when arrested.

The two men were taken to Fredericksburg for questioning by Stafford County Commonwealth's Attorney R. H. L. Chichester.

Hupert Will Challenged For Ex-Wife

The will of Dr. Julius Hupert, who left an estate of more than $200,000 when he died last February8, will be contested in behalf of his divorced wife, it was disclosed yesterday.

A caveat contesting the will was filed in District Court by Attorney Guy M. Meadows, who previously had been appointed by the court as guardian for the divorced wife, Helen, who is a mental patient in California.

At the time of his death, Dr. Hupert, 70, lived in and owned Whyland Apartments, 1724 17th st. nw.

In addition to the apartment house, valued at $136,600, his estate included $70,450 in cash, $5000 in insurance and $200 in personal effects.

Except for a minor trust fund, the entire estate was left to relatives and friends in Dr. Hupert's native Poland. His will directed that the trust fund provide for his former wife's medical treatment. In the event of her being discharged, the will decreed that the trust fund be dissolved and the former wife receive $500.

In the caveat it was said that Dr. Hupert obtained a divorce from his wife in Reno in 1946 on the grounds she had been of unsound mind for two years. It was stated that the Reno court appointed an attorney for Mrs. Hupert, but the representation was "perfunctory."

The caveat declares Dr. Hupert was of unsound mind when he made his will and asks that it be set aside on grounds of fraud, duress, deceit and undue influence.

Dr. Hupert received a medical degree at the University of Lwow in Poland in 1906. He practiced medicine in Illinois and Maryland.

Fighting Will

Mrs. Gizycka Says Home Was Entered

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Felicia Gizycka, who is challenging the will of her mother, the late Eleanor Medill Patterson, has reported to police that her New York apartment was ransacked Saturday night.

The previous Tuesday, she said, a woman intruder apparently entered the apartment when Mrs. Gizycka was out, and identified herself to callers as "a friend staying with Mrs. Gizycka."

New York police said Mrs. Gizycka told them she left her East 36th st. apartment early Saturday night, and when she returned found the front door unlocked and the glass broken in a window overlooking a terrace.

Called "Amateur Job"

Police said there were signs a "quick search" had been made of the apartment, on the top floor of a five-story buildin, where Mrs. Gizycka lives alone. The ransacking was an "amateur job" they indicated, and nothing was missing.

Mrs. Gizycka is contesting her mother's $16,586,571 will in District Court on grounds of fraud, duress and coercion, also contending that her mother was of unsound mind when she made the will. It leaves Mrs. Gizycka $25,000 a year and certain property, while the Washington Times-Herald, which Mrs. Patterson owned and published, would go to seven top executives.

FELICIA GIZYCKA
"I'm just plain Mrs.!"

Denies She's "Countess"

Answering queries about the ransacking report, Mrs. Gizycka took occasion yesterday to object to her often-repeated identification as a "countess," which stems from her mother's first marriage to Polish Count Gizycka.

Divorced from Drew Pearson, and later divorced from Dudley de Lavigne, London insurance broker, Mrs. Gizycka declared, with a laugh:

"For heaven's sake, I'm just plain Mrs.! I'm not a countess, I'm an American citizen. I renounced all that."

Mrs. Gizycka said it appeared that whoever entered her apartment Saturday night got on the terrace and broke the glass to enter. The apartment consists of a bedroom, sitting-room, kitchenette and bath.

Yesterday, for a further check of the ransacking, she said, she hired private detectives who made "a thorough 2½-hour search of the entire place."

Bookshelf Searched

She said they found evidence that someone had been searching through a book shelf, "although there are no papers of value in the apartment."

Two friends told her, she said, they called her apartment Tuesday and were answered by a strange feminine voice saying she was staying with Mrs. Gyzicka.

"It seemed incredible at first until this happened," said Mrs. Gyzicka.

She said she has not yet decided whether to retain the services of the private detectives, but that "burglarproof" locks have been placed on all the doors and windows.

The author of two books and several magazine articles, Mrs. Gizycka said she has been living in the apartment about a year. If her suit to break her mother's will is successful, she will be the sole legal heir.

Municipal Center Luncheon Group Elects Brennan

District Purchasing Agent Roland M. Brennan was elected president yesterday of a newly formed luncheon group of department heads and their deputies who have offices in the Municipal Center.

The organization meeting was held at the Dodge Hotel and was attended by 35 officials, in addition Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner.

Other officers elected were Traffic Director George E. Keneipp, vice president, and Deputy Purchasing Agent R. G. Wessells, secretary-treasurer.

Brennan appointed Director of Construction Archie G. Hutson to head a program committee. Other members are Health Officer George C. Ruhland and Keneipp. The next meeting will be at the Dodge Hotel November 16.

Experts Split On Methods For School Fire Alarms

Murphy-Friede Dispute Provides New Problem for Education Board

Opinion of District fire alarm experts was divided yesterday over what is the best method of sounding an alarm in a school building.

The dispute between Fire Chief Clement Murphy and District Communications Superintendent Herbert A. Friede left school officials with an additional problem in bringing old school buildings in the city up to standard.

Already facing the Board of Education are school building changes estimated to cost $360,000 recommended by the Fire Department to assure the safety of school children.

In addition, school buildings will be placed under additional scrutiny after January 1 when new egress laws go into effect.

District Building Inspector Robert H. Davis said yesterday that his office has begun a survey of school buildings to see if they meet the new requirements.

Exits May Limit Facilities

Special attention will be paid to auditoriums, gymnasiums and cafeterias. It is possible, he said, that some of these facilities may have to be limited in use because of inadequacy of exits.

Murphy and Friede, who disagreed over what kind of an alarm should be set up at the new Birney Elementary School, Nichols ave. and Sumner rd. se., took their arguments to the Commissioners. The disagreement then spread to all schools.

Murphy called for alarm boxes on the street outside school while Friede said he favored use of the Gamewell Co.'s "remote control" boxes placed inside school buildings.

Murphy and an aide, Battalion Chief William H. Ronan, Fire Department executive officer, said the principal concern of the Fire Department is to get the children out on the street. The department does not want anyone returning to a building to sound an alarm, they said.

Remote Control in 46 Schools

Ronan said that 46 schools now have the "remote control" box which generally is located in the office of the principal.

Thirty additional buildings have direct fire alarm boxes within the building.

Ninety-five buildings have no boxes. In every case the school has a telephone and fire alarm boxes are located within half a block of the school.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, who sat in on the meeting with other board members, asked Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning to study the question of fire protection and report at the meeting of the Board of Education at 3:30 p. m. today at the Franklin Administration Building, 13th and K sts. nw.

Inside Boxes in New Schools

Archie Hutson, director of construction for the District, said that inside boxes are placed in all new schools and that each year a limited number of boxes are being installed in old buildings.

School Business Administrator Adelbert W. Heinmiller said that the current school budget allows $36,000 for eliminating fire hazards in schools and installing fire boxes.

The School Board is asking for an additional $75,000 in the 1950 budget to begin a three-year program to make structural building changes recommended by the Fire Department. These include inclosing of stairways and completing the installation of inside fire boxes, he said.

Russell to Speak

Francis H. Russell, director of the Office of Public Affairs of the State Department, will be guest speaker at a luncheon of the Tufts College Alumni Club of Washington Thursday at 12:30 p. m. at the Army and Navy Club.

PUC Hears Plea to Change Bus Routing

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday heard approximately 30 residents of Bradbury Heights and nearby Maryland testify on a rerouting of the Bradbury Heights local bus service.

Following the hearing, PUC Chairman James E. Flanagan announced the PUC will study both the rerouting asked by Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis Motor Line, and a compromise proposal advanced at the hearing by WM&A Traffic Manager Roy A. Chew.

In presenting testimony to justify the rerouting, Chew yesterday pointed out the new route would serve not only Bradbury Heights, but Fort Dupont residents, as well as residents of the northeast corner of Fairfax Village, who now have no bus service.

Bernard C. Pifer, 4441 Alabama ave. se., speaking for the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association, presented a petition signed by more than 200 residents of the area protesting any change in the present bus service.

Pifer later admitted that the compromise proposal advanced by Chew, which would bring service along 45th pl. to Hillside, rather than 46th as first proposed by WM&A, might answer many of the objections of his association.

John Estes of 1811 41st pl. se., speaking for residents of the Fort Dupont area, spoke in favor of the change in the bus routing. He said it might eliminate a number of car pools now used by Fort Dupont residents, and was expected to give better service to about 400 of 600 families living in the area.

Chew pointed out that one of the chief reasons the bus company is asking the route change is to make service more reliable during bad weather. He said the new route would eliminate bus travel on streets of steep grade such as Alabama ave. and Hillside rd., where the motor line last year spent 80 per cent of emergency weather money in sanding.

He added that there have been a number of requests from residents of Normandy Village for service to the neighborhood shopping center and theater there.

Estes asked the commission for a nearly decision on the rerouting, because of the advent of bad weather.

Court Case Waits While Horse Eats

The horse was owned by David Johnson, 65, of 413 17th st. se., a repairman, who was charged with possessing a shed and a fence that are dangerous because they are decidedly off plumb. Both structures are at his home address.

Johnson had been locked up overnight and in the court, at noon, his court-appointed lawyer, Leon Ransom, asked a short continuance.

"Your honor, the defendant informs me that he has a horse at home that hasn't been fed for 18 hours," said Ransom.

Johnson returned on time, took the witness stand and declared:

"That horse was sure glad to see me. He was so hungry he was eating wood."

Thief Gets Turkeys

Anyone who looks too well fed these next few days may find himself getting the eye from a policeman.

He may find himself explaining where he was between the hours of 2:30 and 4:30 a. m. yesterday. And was he near James Cummings' Royal Tavern at 1836 Columbia rd. nw.?

Somebody jimmied open Jimmy's front door. The intruder not only took a nice plump turkey ready for the oven but also walked off with a 12-gallon aluminum cooker in which to cook same.

Just in case it's a long winter, the thief also appropriated a cooked turkey, two hams, 20 sirloin steaks, 12 fifths of Scotch whisky, 24 fifths of bourbon whisky and some change from a cigarette machine.

2 Rewarded for Ideas

Two Greater Washington civilian employes of the Navy Bureau of Ships have received cash awards of $275 each for time and money-saving ideas submitted under a "beneficial suggestion" program.

Philip T. Russell, 3508 Perry st., Mount Rainier, Md., suggested an improved shipboard hoist system whereby underwater sound equipment used in detection of submarines may be raised, lowered or rotated.

Albert F. Bird, 4070 Temple Hills rd. se., proposed use of photo-enlargement of body plans for ships—in place of the manual method.

Driver Training

The Board of Education today will receive two dual-control automobiles from the Inter-Industry Highway Safety Committee so driver training classes may be started at McKinley and Armstrong High Schools.

Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, will receive the vehicles from Roy Devereaux, District committee chairman. The presentation will be made at Franklin School, 13th and K sts. nw.

Health Unit Member

Mrs. E. E. Van Meter, principal of the Patrick Henry Elementary School, has been chosen a member of the Arlington County Tuberculosis Association's Board of Directors, Gustave A. Moe, president, said today.

Mrs. Van Meter, who was formerly health educator for the association, received the unanimous vote of the board. She will fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Mrs. Charles E. Planck.

Negro School Issue in Va. Court Friday

School officials in two Virginia counties are preparing plans for their appearance Friday before a Federal judge in Richmond to "show cause" why they should not be held in contempt of court.

Judge Sterling Hutcheson issued the show cause orders last month following a directive to King George and Gloucester Counties to provide equal school facilities for Negro high school students.

By Friday, King George County hopes a date will have been set by Circuit Judge Leon M. Bazile at Fredericksburg for a referendum on a new $150,000 school for the county's Negroes.

In compliance with a King George County School Board resolution, a group of citizens there have obtained the required 270 signatures on a petition to request the referendum election. School Superintendent T. Benton Gayle said the petition would show the county is acting in good faith in an effort to equalize facilities.

10,000 Throng Exhibits at Home Show on 4th Day

An estimated 10,000 persons toured the 150-odd exhibits at the Home Show yesterday as the annual exposition at the National Guard Armory, 19th and East Capitol sts., went through its fourth day.

Sponsored by the Homebuilders Association of Metropolitan Washington, the show will continue daily and Sunday through October 24 from 1 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. Admission is 80 cents for adults.

In yesterdays semifinals of the "Home Show Queen" contest—the winner to be awarded an all-aluminum vacation cottage worth more than $3500—two more women were chosen by the audience to vie for the queen title October 24. They are:

Mrs. Carl A. S. Coan, 35, of 400 West Broad st., Falls Church, and Mrs. Loraine Barger, 30, of 808 7th st. sw.

J. E. Eskey Dies; Disabled War Veteran

James E. Eskey, 59, disabled World War I veteran and brother of Arthur L. Eskey, a vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., died Monday in St. Petersburg, Fla., after a heart attack.

Disabled by shrapnel during the first war, Mr. Eskey had spent several years in veterans' hospitals. He made his home in St. Petersburg during the winter, and lived in Pittsburgh, where he was born, the rest of the time. He had been a temporary resident of Washington on several occasions.

Besides his brother here, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Marguerite Eskey, of St. Petersburg, and two brothers and a sister, all of Pittsburgh. They are Drs. Ward W. and Ellsworth E. Eskey, and Mrs. Henrietta Orum, a former Washingtonian.

Private funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Friday in Arlington Cemetery.

Robert S. Brooks, Jr.

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 19 (AP).—Robert S. Brooks, jr., 57, former president of the Grocery Manufacturers' Representatives Association and widely known food broker, died last night after a long illness.

He attended Staunton Military Academy and was a graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Brooks, reside at Norfolk, Va.

Widower, 58, Kills Self With Shotgun

A 58-year-old widower, despondent since his wife died three months ago, yesterday was found shot to death in his apartment at 3420 16th st. nw.

He was Benjamin Franklin Marsh, a former building guard and a retired depot clerk for the Capital Transit Co.

He was found lying on the floor of the apartment's living room. A single-barrel shotgun was at his side. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, who issued a certificate of suicide, said Marsh had been dead for several days.

Two notes were lying on the desk in the living room. One, addressed to police, asked that Marsh's body be sent to the Lee funeral home for cremation and that there be no ceremony of any kind. The second note was of a personal nature and addressed to a friend, C. G. Van Enom, of Barnesville, Md., police said.

Friends said Marsh had retired August 1 from his job with the Capital Transit Co. because of ill health, caused by desponency over his wife's recent death. They had no children.

Marsh was discovered by an elevator operator in the building, who became concerned at not having seen him for several days and looked through the keyhole into the apartment. When she saw Marsh on the floor, she called the resident manager, who entered the apartment with a pass key and then called police.

Police theorized that Marsh sat on the sofa, propped one end of the shotgun on the floor with the barrel pointed against his head, and then pulled the trigger.

A native of Warsaw, Ill., he had resided in Falls Church, Va., until moving to the apartment house five years ago.

Physicist Wins $2500 in Damages From Alexandria

The City of Alexandria was ordered by the Alexandria Circuit Court yesterday to pay $2500 to a Government psysicist who attributed injuries he suffered in an accident last spring to the city's negligence.

Plaintiff R. L. Steinberger, 1200 Janney's la., Alexandria, told a jury he and his wife were driving in the 400 block of Quaker la., March 29, when their car struck a hole in the pavement.

The car went out of control, Steinberger said, and crashed into a telegraph pole. As a result of the accident, Steinberger said he received a broken knee and was laid up for three months. He asked $10,000 damages.

Truman Foes On Committee Face Ouster

The Fairfax County Democratic Committee yesterday was advised that the committee can "properly" call for the resignation of any committee member who refuses to support the Truman-Barkley ticket in the coming national elections.

The decision was handed down by Gardner L. Boothe, chairman of Virginia's Eighth District Democratic Committee. Boothe said the party plan gives the county committee power needed to expel any committee member who does not support party nominees at "any election."

Last Friday, the Fairfax County committee members voted to request resignation of committee members who refuse to support the Truman-Barkley ticket. After the resolution was adopted, committee members Paul L. Sweeney and James Byrnes, both of McLean, Va., resigned, but they agreed to withhold their resignations pending the decision from the higher party body.

Last night, W. Franklin Gooding, chairman of the Fairfax County committee, said he will "take no further action in the matter," but will "let them be guided by their own consciences."

NOW SHE SHOPS "CASH AND CARRY"
Without Painful Backache

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Parties Honor Diplomats, Artist, Bride-to-Be

THE first of two cocktail parties was given yesterday by the Counselor of the French Embassy and Mme. Wapler, who will entertain at cocktails again today. Around 50 guests attended the party, and as many more will be invited today.

The Counselor of the French Embassy and Mme. de Margerie were among the guests as well as the Belgian Attache and Mme. Paternotte de la Vaillee. Others included the First Secretary of the Swedish Embassy and Mme. Rydbeck, the Counselor of the Danish Embassy and Mme. Bertelsen, Mr. and Mrs. Tyler Thompson and Edward Nash.

Brian Stonehouse's Work Seen at Preview Tea

PORTRAITS of Washingtonians, and sketches of scenes at Dachau, where the artist was imprisoned during the war, were shown yesterday at a preview of first American exhibition of the British painter, Brian Stonehouse. The exhibition was at the Playhouse Theater art gallery.

Hostess at the preview tea was Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller, and among the guests were the British Minister and Mrs. Frederic Hoyer Millar, Mr. and Mrs. Nevile Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, MacGill James and Mrs. James, who was among those assisting Mrs. Millar. Others asked to assist were Mrs. Deborah Leighton Glassford, Mrs. Ernest von Heimberg, Mrs. Katharine Byron, Mrs. Lee Parke and Mrs. George J. Woods.

Other guests who had been invited were the Indian Ambassador and Lady Ramu Rau, the Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. Hume Wrong, the Australian Ambassador and Mrs. Norman Makin and the Minister of New Zealand and Lady Berendsen.

Cocktail Party Honors Mrs. George, Cmdr. Wicker

MRS. SENATE GEORGE and Lieut. Comdr. Whiting Wicker, who will be married on Saturday, were entertained at a cocktail party yesterday by the bride-elect's close friends, Mr. and Mrs. James McSherry Wimsatt.

Among the guests — all old friends of Mrs. George and her fiance — were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Clagett, Miss Polly Norment, Lieut. George Williams, Maj. Taylor Simmons, Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fangboner, Miss Ann Gillespie, Mr. and Mrs. William Sasscer Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Brewster Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Smith, Barry Woods, Miss Virginia Guilfoyle.

Also, Maj. Al Barnum, Lieut. Dennis Moore, Mr. and Mrs. William Hutchinson, jr., of Laurel; Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Bradford, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Marstellar, Mrs. Thomas Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Huntington Morse and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Burke.

Mme. Rybar, Mrs. Jacobs Give Dinner Party

MME. VLADIMIR RYBAR and Mrs. Leslie P. Jacobs entertained at the first of a series of supper parties last evening at Mrs. Jacobs' home in Georgetown. Guests included Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister; Gen. and Mrs. John N. Greely, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Roy St. Lewis, Mrs. Clark Butler, Col. Clare Hardy, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Smith and Sven Lungren.

Mrs. Jacobs will have with her for a visit her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Orin Ernst, who will arrive on Friday from Arizona.

Farewell Parties Honor Miss Baker

MISS ELMA BAKER is sailing Friday on the S.S. Santa Rosa for Caracas, Venezuela, where she will be attached to the United States Embassy. A series of farewell parties in honor of Miss Baker have been given every day for the past several weeks. Among those who have entertained for her are Miss Louise Gould, Miss Julia Foraker, Mr. and Mrs. James Walden, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Prasse, Miss Mary Morison and Aubrey Starke.

For Mothers to Be

Diets for Pregnancy Avoid Excess Weight

By Ida Jean Kain

(This is the second in a series of six articles)

OBSTETRICIANS are emphasizing more and more the importance of avoiding an excessive gain in weight during the pregnancy period. The amount of weight to be gained by the expectant mother is a matter for the doctor to determine. Usually the woman of normal weight is allowed to gain from 15 to 20 pounds; the overweight is restricted to a 15-pound gain, sometimes less; and the underweight is encouraged to gain considerable weight.

However, the amount of weight which you personally should gain during this time is up to your doctor. Please do not inform him this dietician advised you to gain no more than 15 pounds. Nor should any dietary changes be made without his permission.

Also, let me make it abundantly clear that a weight control diet at this time is vastly different from a regular reducing diet. When there is a tendency to put on too much weight, the calories must be lessened, but a low calorie diet adequate under normal conditions, would be dangerously inadequate for the expectant mother. If the daily fare does not include protective material, nature will draw on the mother's reserve. Her health is affected first. On a very poor diet, the baby, of course, will suffer too.

If you understand why certain foods are indispensable in the diet, you will not want to run the risk of leaving them out of the daily menus.

Don't Run Risks

SINCE pregnancy is a period of growth, extra protein and minerals are needed for building the muscles, tissues and bones of the new baby. Complete protein is furnished in milk, meat, eggs and cheese. A quart of milk is required daily to furnish the additional calcium and phosphorus to safeguard the mother's teeth and bones as well as to furnish material required by the baby.

Most expectant mothers realize the need for more calcium, and dutifully drink milk, but too many overlook the equally important need for extra vitamins which are essential to the utilization of the minerals. Increased amounts of vitamins A, C and D are essential. These are supplied in dairy products, dark green leafy vegetables, meat organs, citrus fruits and juices, tomatoes and juice, and in cod liver oil and halibut liver oil, or a vitamin concentrate.

Additional iron is also of paramount importance. Nature stores iron in the liver of the baby. If the daily diet does not furnish enough of this mineral, the new mother will be anemic, tired and flabby, and will have a most difficult time restoring her health and figure to normal. Meat and eggs are the richest sources of iron and are required daily. The meat organs are an excellent source of iron as well as vitamins.

The new leaflet protective nutrition for expectant mothers includes a low-cost, 2500 calorie diet menu. Please send long, stamped, self addressed envelope to The Washington Post with request.

Laundry Hints

Bed linens last longer if allowed to rest between use periods. Put laundered sheets at the bottom of the linen drawer, using only those from the top.

When hanging the family wash, hang the articles straight and by their strongest parts to make them last longer.

If you fold straight pieces straight as they come from the washline and place them flat and smooth in the basket to keep them in shape and as unwrinkled as possible you will save extra work in ironing.

Do This for Head-Cold Stuffiness!

Instantly—the moment you put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol in each nostril—you'll feel your cold-stuffed nose start to open up and give you wonderful relief from sniffy head-cold distress. Va-tro-nol acts so fast because it works right where trouble is. It relieves stuffy congestion, and makes breathing easier. If used in time, Va-tro-nol helps prevent many colds from developing! Ask Anne About Uses for Discarded Beads

I am writing to ask if you know of any place where I can dispose of beads. I have quite a few that have collected from time to time and thought perhaps there might be some place where children might use them.
I. F.

Friendship House, an agency of the Community Chest, uses large beads only, in occupational therapy work and welcomes donations. The address is 619 D st. se.

I should like to have a tailor or dressmaker make a good quality tweed coat of a type suitable to have a fur lining fastened in during colder weather. At the same time, I want to have a furrier experienced in this kind of work cut a squirrel coat of mine into a lining suitable for such a coat. The tailors I've spoken to can't recommend a furrier and the furriers don't seem to work with the tailors. What I need is one place which would be responsible for seeing that the two jobs are coordinated. Any suggestions? B. R. W.

A tailoring firm here that could do the complete job for you can be reached by telephoning North 0632. They do excellent work, but warn that this is a difficult job and would be quite expensive.

I would like to find some group who will do hand quilting. I have known of church groups who do this sort of thing. Can you recommend someone? I am anxious to have a "professional" looking job. J. R.

The Ladies Guild of Ingram Memorial Congregational Church does quilting, but is swamped with work now. If your order is put in now, they can start on a new quilt near the first of the year. Members meet for quilting one day a week, and each quilt takes 6 to 8 weeks. If you can wait this long for your quilt, telephone Mrs. L. E. DeAtley, Franklin 8013. Perhaps some reader can suggest another group that also does good work of this type.

All my very best clothes have gotten too small for me. I have searched my wardrobe for something to wear to church, etc., but with the exception of one dress and a few summer clothes I really don't have anything to wear. Since I have been having financial problems, I wonder if you could make any suggestions on where I might sell my old clothes and buy some new ones. I have not been in the habit of buying used clothes, but I am to the place where I cannot be too particular, just so the things will be clean and in good condition.

There are several places of the "thrift shop" type in this area that sell good used clothing on commission, and it seems to me one of these would be your best bet in replacing your wardrobe. One, located in the 2000 block of Massachusetts ave., can be reached by telephoning Columbia 0005. Another, on South Royal st., in Alexandria, can be telephoned at Alexandria 0649. The telephone of another, located on Hamblen lane in Bethesda, is Wisconsin 9843.

Have you a recipe for small sherry pralines? I. W.

I haven't a recipe for this kind of praline. Can you help us, readers?

In carrying home my groceries the other day, the juice from a frozen haddock (not so frozen!) soiled a lavender chambray dress. I have used a detergent, bleach, etc., to no avail. Could you help me? S. B. H.

Fish slime stains can usually be removed as follows: Soak or sponge with a solution of ½ cup salt and 1 cup vinegar in 2 quarts water. Rinse well in water, then wash in warm soapsuds.

Young Mother's Vicious Intemperate Rages Directed at Her Normally Active Small Sons Are Causing Concern Among Her Next-of-Kin

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Our sister Joyce has two lovely boys whose behavior is normal for their age,—four and six years. Joyce gives them excellent care, materially. They are well fed and well clothed, have a spotless home, and she often indulges them beyond what her moderate income justifies.

However, since their infancy she has displayed such a vicious unreasonable temper with them that those of us who have observed this are constantly worried about the ill-effects it has on them now, and the future outcome.

Any little thing may cause her to scream at them, sometimes in unprintable language. For instance, if they waken early, as most young children do, and their whispers or play disturb their parents, they are screamed at and punished.

Worried Sister Solicits Advice

THE FATHER'S treatment is also severe on many occasions, but we suspect it is governed largely by Joyce's attitude; and he never opposes her intemperance. What amazes us is that the little fellows show normal affection for their mother, although the older boy told her recently that he was going to run away from that "mean house."

I spent a weekend there recently and some inconsequential act of one of the boys invoked such violent ravings and threats from Joyce that I became completely unnerved and had to leave before the scheduled time. We have tried by tactful suggestion and example to improve the situation, without avail; and anything more blunt would result in estrangement, leaving us no contact with or news of the children.

While we have no desire to dictate to Joyce with respect to her children, her violence with them has been so persistent and upsetting that we feel she needs some kind of help; but we are completely at a loss to know what. Can you advise us? E. S.

Mother Engrossed in Self-Concerns

DEAR E. S.: Life, for Joyce, is a drama of self-worship. She is the heroine of all that concerns her. Her house of marriage is simply a stage setting, the most "model" she can make it by, say, Vogue-type standards, in which she would preen herself in the role of chic young matron leading the full life, and she petulantly resents any "tiresome" intrusion upon her ritualistic self-engrossment.

She wanted "a home of her own," of course; also a husband to head it socially, and supply the income to keep it going with choice equipment; also children to fill out the picture—or maybe that was the husband's idea.

But as for being a wife and mother in the creative, nurturing, mature-loving, richly self-giving sense of the term, well, Joyce shriekingly proclaims distaste for the proposition, as an odious hijacking demand on her precious vitality, which she feels should be conserved, every drop of it, to prolong her youth and sustain her zest and fitness for narcissistic forms of "self-expression."

Father's Behind Eight-Ball, Too

HER HUSBAND'S unmanly echo and tacit endorsement of her vicious severity with the children suggests that he feels "behind the eight-ball" along with them, in her estimation; and very possibly her "raging" impatience with his progeny carries a secret message of smouldering hostility aimed at him, for having involved her in their begetting.

In other words, it occurs to me that in jumping on the boys for nothing at all, she is irrationally venting a peeve at papa for having brought motherhood upon her; and maybe by now papa has an unconscious double-dyed guilt sense (implanted by her) about his enterprise in this respect, and the fruits thereof, hence tends involuntarily to "shout down" the boys, too, as intolerable trespassers in his erstwhile Garden of Eden.

Lots of infantile wives carry on like this; and lots of infantile husbands, bamboozled and witless, let the children take the rap. In which case there is no "help" for the situation, unless some elder statesman (or matriarch) in the clan has the moral drive and force of personality to verbally lambast the parents into doing right, by haling them before the Court of Family Opinion and reading the Riot Act. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest O. Osborne

Learning Through Touch

We often forget that much learning comes through touch sensations. The nature of all kinds of things is made more clear through our fingers. Little children, especially, enjoy this sort of learning. They find that some pieces of cloth are smooth and silky, others are rough, that a stove is hot and a piece of ice cold, that knives are sharp and flypaper very sticky.

One of the most important ways of touching for the young child is through his lips. The sensitive nerves of the lips tell the child a great deal concerning the world about him.

We parents usually are afraid the child will be hurt by hot, sharp or rough things and warn him or prohibit him from touching them. But our words are far less meaningful than a little first-hand experience would be. Naturally, we must use discretion. We wouldn't allow him to touch a red-hot stove or a razor-edged knife. But he can learn about heat and sharpness without going to extremes.

Exciting as the sound of trumpets, our military decorations, that may be worn singly or grouped in distinctive arrangements on a favored beret, a suit, or wool dress. Each pin has its own historical background—regimental orders from England and Canada share honors with an official lion's head buckle of the Confederate infantry (not shown) . . . All are handsomely gold-plated and enameled in color. From our collection, exclusive in Washington, we show, counter-clockwise: George Rex sunburst, $4; Constantine Cross, $5; Sunburst, $8; British pips, $2.50 each. All plus tax.

First Group 'Falls In' For Recruit Training As Women of Air Forces

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., Oct. 19.

Today at Lackland Field the newly organized women in the Air Force went to work. The first contingent of 84 enlisted women arrived for the 11-week indoctrination course yesterday and within 24 hours had been outfitted, billeted and were already at classes. The second batch, some 40 strong were processed this morning under the sympathetic eyes of female journalists who had been flown down from Washington and New York for the historic occasion. Within an hour we saw a group of young girls in pretty dresses transformed into a surprisingly military platoon of women soldiers.

They were assembled in the reception room of the processing center drinking coffee, munching cake at 10 o'clock. Before 11 they "fell in" outside the building wearing flight regulation caps, regulation oxfords and Army field coats. Divided into four squads they marched, with almost masterly precision when the WAF sergeant called the command in the usual indistinguishable syllables.

In between they had been welcomed by one of the post's six chaplains, written their names and religious preference on a card, had been given a free book of scriptures.

Part of their uniforms were issued and in jigtime, a little like a butterfly emerging from its cocoon only in reverse, they emerged in striped seersucker gymnasium dresses and, following a red line painted on the floor, stepped snappily through a maze of blood tests, check ups and, toughest to tak an inoculation jabbed in each arm while the reporters and an assortment of male and female officers looked on. To the glory of the frailer sex only one out of the bunch turned a trifle green.

At the Mess Hall

AFTER a lesson in military bedmaking the brand new WAF squadron marched to the mess hall. Here they filled up on lamb chops, mashed potatoes, string beans, lettuce and tomato salad with mayonnaise, bread, peach jam, coffee and wedges of blueberry pie. As they marched off from the processing center there was something extremely touching about their earnest young faces, something adventurously courageous in their determined stride. But in the mess hall under the influence of good food they were just a bunch of nice young girls having a good time.

They come from all over and they're all sizes and shapes but more on the smallish side. Many are pretty, a few plain and most of them regard their three year enlistment as the beginning of a full-time military career.

A home town girl Mary Webster of 2504 North 4th st., Arlington, intends to do just this. She's 23, has worked as a librarian and intends to make the WAF's her career. She is the daughter of Major Daniel Webster, at present stationed in Japan, who at first disliked the idea of women in the armed forces but after having worked on their program at the Pentagon fell for them lock, stock and of course barrel and urged his daughter to join up.

Permanent Staff Pleased

THE permanent staff stationed here are enthusiastic about the quality of recruits.

They're off to a good start on a new venture which includes study and opportunities equal to those of the men in the Air Force in every field except combat work. And in the recent classes to train flight chiefs—a sort of glorified boss and chaperon of each squad of 30 girls—eight women were enrolled and these same women headed the class. It's nice work girls and fun, too.

Miss van Burkom Is Betrothed to Harry Hirshberg

Mrs. J. van Burkom of Doorn, The Netherlands, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Johanna Francina van Burkom of Washington, to Harry N. Hirshberg, jr. The bride-elect is on the staff of the Netherlands Embassy. During the war she served with the Netherlands Women's Auxiliary Forces.

Mr. Hirshberg was graduated from the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania, in 1935. He has lived in Washington since 1936. During the war he served as a lieutenant commander in the Navy. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Hirshberg of Buffalo, N. Y.

Philippine Envoy Is Dinner Host

A dinner was given at the Philippine Embassy last evening by the Ambassador, Joaquin M. Elizalde, in honor of several recent arrivals from the Philippines.

Twenty-four persons attended the dinner including the new Philippine Minister and Mrs. Abello, Senator Thomas Cabili, Senator Camilo Osias, Congresswoman Remedios Fortich, Secretary of Finance, Miguel Cuaderno, the Philippine Minister-designate to the Argentine and Mrs. Narciso Ramos, the Counselor of the Embassy and Mrs. Melquiades J. Gamboa, the Commercial Counselor and Mrs. Urbano A. Zafar, and the Military Attache and Mrs. Jaime C. Velasquez. After dinner, other members of the embassy staff and their wives joined the party.

Attend Ceremonies

Comdr. and Mrs. Earle H. Kincaid, who have been in New York, attended the installation ceremonies of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower as president of Columbia University. They returned to Washington for a brief stay before leaving yesterday for Pinehurst, N. C., where Commander Kincaid will attend the Morris Plan Bankers' convention.

Patriotic Groups Convene At National Board Meetings

By Genevieve Reynolds

National heads of four patriotic women's organizations poured into Washington yesterday to map out yearly programs in council or board meetings. Some 250 delegates to the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America set up convention quarters in the Shoreham Hotel and dashed over to the group's national headquarters, Dumbarton House, 2715 Q st. nw., for a closed executive session. Meantime, over at the Mayflower Hotel board members of the National Society, Daughters of Colonial Wars, voted to continue its amusement and rehabilitation project at Percy Jones Hospital.

Both the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Children of the American Revolution have scheduled board meetings for today. Majority of the societies' board members arrived in time to attend a ground-breaking ceremony for the new $900,000 addition to the DAR administration building at 17th and D sts. nw., held yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne of Brookville, Ind., president general of the DAR, broke the soil with a beribboned spade. "Growth and expansion of the DAR over recent years now is a reality," she commented as she turned up the earth.

Ground for the new building was consecrated by Mrs. Robert Keene Arnold, chaplain general of the society. Music was furnished by the U. S. Marine Band Orchestra.

Aid Veterans

The Daughters of Colonial Wars contributed a juke box, records, books and radio to the some 4000 amputee veterans receiving treatment at the Percy Jones Hospital in Michigan. Originated during the war, the society will continue to provide extras to brighten the lives of the patients. Mrs. Benjamin F. Buckley of Lexington, Ky., presided.

A tea at which the Virginia Society was hostess was the social highlight of the National Society of Colonial Dames assembly yesterday afternoon.

Prior to the war the national society trained many Indian nurses who saw duty in the war. The project will be resumed following a favorable vote by the board this week to renew the training of the Indian girls.

Mrs. Donald Bennet Adams, national president of the CAR, has called the board meeting for 10 a. m. today in the Administration Building at 1720 D st. nw.

Officers Attend

In town for the board meeting are Mrs. Carbon H. Gillaspie of Boulder, Colo., chaplain; Mrs. William Morrill Parker, of Parkersburg, W. Va., corresponding secretary; Mrs. John W. Hoffman of Peoria, Ill., historian; Mrs. William O. Todd of Pauls Valley, Okla., librarian-curator and many State officers. Several of the national officers are District residents including Mrs. Carl H. Giroux, vice president; Mrs. Samuel Eest Russell, treasurer; Mrs. John F. Nebel, assistant registrar.

Tonight society heads and board members of the organizations will attend a benefit card party sponsored jointly by the CAR and the DAR headquarters staffs in Constitution Hall.

League of Voters Hears Of Legislative Issues

Miss Muriel Ferris, legislative secretary of the National League of Women Voters, spoke on "Main Issues Facing the Eighty-first Congress," before the evening group of the District League of Women Voters at a meeting last night at 1626 K st. nw.

Blames Truman For Dissension

Mrs. Mabel Sites Fraser, vice president of the Indiana State Republican Central Committee, last night accused President Truman of sewing seeds of dissension, fanning flames of intolerance and submerging the united strength of this Nation. She issued her charges in an address at a dinner meeting of the D. C. League of Republican Women's evening study group held in the United Nations Club.

Praising GOP Presidential Candidate Thomas E. Dewey and lambasting the Chief Executive, she told the Republican audience, "A man who has failed his country at home and abroad, calls upon millions to share his desperation. In an hour when Americans are looking to their leaders for sober thought, solidarity and sound action, he (Truman) is sowing the seeds of dissension, fanning the flames of intolerance, and submerging the united strength of the one nation on earth that can stabilize a world in which fear, hate and suspicion are running amuck."

The speaker said that the times permit no division, no dissension and no discord. "Only an America whole and wholesome can meet the challenger of the atomic age," she asserted.

Maintaining that our domestic battle is against a system of rule fathered and favored by the New Deal, she declared "Our enemy at home is bureaucracy—abroad it is communism."

Dewey-Warren Group Plans Tea Oct. 28

The Special Gifts Committee of the Dewey-Warren Club of Washington held their regular weekly meeting yesterday at the home of Mrs. Harold Walker. Mrs. Thad H. Brown, chairman of the committee, was assisted by Mrs. Ann Archbold, Mrs. Breckenridge Bayne, Mrs. Fred Britten, Mrs. Charles W. Bunker, Mrs. Thad Brown, jr., Mrs. William Foster Burdick, Mrs. Ulric Bell, Miss Helen Bland, Mrs. Harry Cain, Mrs. William Castle, Mrs. William C. Coe and Mrs. Morris Cafritz.

Other active members on the committee include Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, Mrs. Everett Dirksen, Mrs. Davis Elkins, Mrs. Thomas Eberly, Mrs. Robert E. Freer, Mrs. Clyde Garrett, Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. Edwin W. Gableman, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, jr., Mrs. James Pomeroy Hendricks, Mrs. Alf Heiberg, Mrs. Perry Heath, Mrs. Douglas Hatch, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Miss Elizabeth Howry and Mrs. Charles Whitney Price.

In addition to fund raising reports the committee discussed plans for a tea to be given at the home of Mrs. Anne Archbold on Reservoir rd., October 28, in honor of the National and State Republican campaign leaders and fund raising workers.

1000 Volunteers to Attend Girl Scout Regional Sessions

More than 1000 representative adult volunteers of 114 Girl Scout organizations of Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Virginia and the District of Columbia will attend the regional conference of Girl Scout leaders, local council and committee members opening at the Statler Hotel tomorrow.

The Girl Scouts of Prince Georges County will open the meeting with a flag ceremony, followed by a message of greeting from Mrs. Adolphus Staton, president of the National Capital Area Federation of Girl Scout Councils.

Mrs. C. Harry Vaughan, national president of the Girl Scouts, will give the keynote speech, and Mrs. Harry Sartoris, conference program chairman, will address the group at the opening session.

The international phases of scouting will be discussed at the Thursday evening session with Mrs. E. Swift Newton, chairman of the world committee of the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts, as guest speaker.

Outdoor activities will be featured at the Friday session with Mrs. Walter Bond, regional camp committee chairman, presiding. Other highlights of the conference will be a series of clinics, panel discussions and consultations on various phases and problems of scouting and the needs of youth.

A colorful note will be added Thursday night when a group of Girl Scouts, under the direction of Mrs. Emilio Abello, second national vice commissioner of the Girl Scouts of the Philippines, present a program of Philippine dances, to be followed by an international flag ceremony by Scouts in costume.

The closing session on Friday will be addressed by Dr. Lillian M. Gilbreth, national board member. The conference will end with a ceremony by the Girl Scouts of Washington, Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax Counties.

Mrs. Elenore Hoover of Waynesboro, Pa., is chairman of the regional committee, and Mrs. O'Neal Johnson is in charge of the committee on arrangements.

Loyalty Purges Decried by Speaker At Shoppers League

The loyalty purges not only violate the basic ideas of our democracy but they are corrupting the thinking of America, I. F. Stone, Washington correspondent of the New York Star, told members of the Washington League of Women Shoppers at a luncheon meeting yesterday.

Behind the loyalty purges is the breakdown of two basic fundamental American ideas, he said; (1) faith in freedom, and (2) the principle that the first concern is for the individual in the enforcement of law.

We must fight the loyalty purges not only for the Government employes but for the future of America, he concluded.

Mr. Jackson is the son of Mrs. Ewell Jackson of Hillsville and the late Mr. Jackson. The bride-elect was graduated from Radford College. The wedding will take place in December.

Krauss—Deese

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Krauss of Silver Spring announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ellin Ruth Krauss, to James E. Deese, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Levy of Los Angeles. The bride-elect will receive her A.B. degree in psychology from George Washington University in May.

Mr. Deese was graduated from Chapman College and received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Indiana University. He is assistant professor of psychology at Johns Hopkins University.

Kemp—Alexander

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Kemp announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Lee, to C. Albert Alexander of Steubenville, Ohio. Miss Kemp was graduated from the University of Maryland where she was a member of Alpha Xi Delta Sorority. Her fiance is now a student at that university.

Gold—Malman

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gold of Boston, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth F., to Leon Malman, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Malman of Belle Harbor, N. Y.

Miss Gold is an alumna of Hunter College. Mr. Malman was graduated from Columbia College and Columbia Law School. He was formerly employed in Washington as legislative counsel for the War Department.

Schindler—Volk

Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Schindler announce the engagement of their daughter, Muriel, to Myron E. Volk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Volk.

Miss Schindler attended George Washington University and is a former president of Phi Delta Sorority. Her fiance attended the University of Missouri and George Washington University. The wedding will take place in January.

Garden Clubs To Take Part In Homes Tour

Several of Alexandria's garden clubs are entered in a floral arrangement contest to be given in connection with the Alexandria old homes tour Saturday.

Each club will furnish flower designs for one of the houses, and they will be judged and awarded blue, red and white ribbons during the first hour of the tour. The judges include Ernest W. Davenport, Mrs. Lee Webster Selse and Mrs. Robert Ash.

Among the homes to be shown are those of Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, 3201 Duke st. extended; Mrs. Ford Swetnam, 815 Franklin st.; Mr. and Mrs. Welly K. Hopkins, 323 S. Fairfax st.; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hulfish, 200 Duke st.; Mr. and Mrs. John Maury, 521 S. Lee st.; Mr. and Mrs. Charges G. Caffrey, 215 S. Royal st.; Mrs. Carlton-Smith, 603 Queen st.; Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin McElhinney, jr., 3200 Duke st. extended; Dr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Mourot, 811 Prince st., and Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sisson, 120 S. Lee st.

Tickets are available at George Mason Hotel and at any of the houses to be shown.

District WCTU Will Convene

The D. C. Women's Christian Temperance Union has scheduled its fall convention for October 25-26 at the Fourth Presbyterian Church, 13th and Fairmont sts., nw.

Mrs. Guy F. Glossbrenner, first vice president, will preside in the absence of the president, Mrs. Caroline E. Coates, who is on a speaking tour in the West and South.

The sessions will begin each day at 10:30 a. m., and the banquet will take place at 6 p. m. on October 25 with a program following. Walter H. Ralls will address the evening meeting on the subject "A New Look for the W. C. T. U." The Rev. John Carpenter Palmer will give the invocation and the Rev. James H. Miers the benediction. Mrs. Grace Clifford Howard has made arrangements for the program.

Mrs. John M. Potter is chairman of the church committee. Edward A. Carey is the church director, and Mrs. Ralph is in charge of the music.

National Council Of Jewish Women Observe Week

This week has been designated National Council of Jewish Women's Week.

Mrs. Theodore D. Peyser, president of the District of Columbia section, announces that during the week the organization will continue its main projects at Warwick Memorial Cancer Clinic, the Economy Shop, 650 Park rd., and at the Juanita Kaufman Nye Council House.

The Warwick Clinic, maintained under auspices of George Washington University, is the newest project of the local council. Volunteers serve there as clerical workers, typists, dictaphone operators, file clerks, receptionists and nurses' aides.

The District of Columbia Council has scheduled its first business meeting of the season for 1:30 p. m. today at the Jewish Community Center.

On the Town

THE houselights dimmed, the spots came up and Maestro Breeskin introduced another Shoreham Blue Room show. It was led off by a few songs from Ricci, who had a feature spot in the show for the first time, then Brother Barnee introduced Tung Pin Soo, the supposed Charlie Chan of the nightclubs. So what was our first reaction? Just another not so magic magician. Tung Pin Soo, or Chop Chop, which is a nickname and so much easier to remember, did a few tricks with the iron rings that join and then slip apart with apparently no effort on the part of the magician. Of course it had always been a deep conviction of ours that the rings had a sliding section that enabled such magician to slip the darned things off and on at will. Because of this conviction, we didn't watch the act too closely.

Tung Pin Soo

Time passed, so did the act, and Manor and Mignon came on the stage with their ballroom dancing. Manor and Mignon played the Terrace earlier this year and held their own very well with a combination of dancing and affectionate little gestures toward each other that always help sell an act to the audience. Their routines are cute and they go over well.

More time passed and we looked up to see Chop Chop on the stage again. Suddenly he came charging down on us with a couple of the iron rings in his hands. A moment later we were standing on the floor with one of the rings firmly grasped in our slightly perspiring hands. Then lo and behold, and with the help of a couple of taps on the ring and a breath blown just right way, the darned things seemed to slip together without the aid of the sliding joints. The so whatish feeling began leaving at a rapid rate at the same instant the rings fell apart.

Next, Chop Chop darted a hand into our coat and came out with a flapping pigeon. Now believe us when we say that we're not in the habit of sharing our clothes with pigeons, alive or dead, but some way or another the flapping ball of feathers had made it inside our coat without disturbing so much as a fleck of dandruff. Mystified? Not really, but from this day hence we plan to burn a bit of incense before our newly acquired Buddha each and every night.

Grooming Tip

Primping at Office Won't Win the Boss

By Betty Clarke

THE chances are you will never marry your boss. It doesn't seem necessary, then, to go to work like an Egyptian princess, or to strive for the title of "Office Pin-Up Girl."

If you do a good job, the average boss won't be interested in the quality of your clothes or your hair style. He'd rather have you concentrate on the filing and stenography than your compact.

It is wonderful, of course, if you can accomplish beautiful grooming and perform a splendid job, too. But don't give the boss the impression that you are beautifying yourself on his time.

You should appear at your desk in the morning at the appointed hour all set to earn your salary. It is startling to an employer to see a wan creature, hair in pincurls, sans makeup, dash into the office at the last minute, only to emerge from her desk an hour later looking like a glamor girl. Obviously, she has been wasting his time.

Girls who are looking for their first job should keep in mind that the tailored look has the most appeal to a prospective employer. This can mean either a tailored suit or a smartly cut simple dress. Hat should be neat and trim, shoe heels low. Sequin-studded dresses and spike heels will not sell him. It will only reflect your lack of good taste.

AFTER you land the job, try to keep up your good appearance. Put your hair up in pincurls at night, keep your blouses and hose clean and in good repair, shoes polished. It is better to discard a dollar pair of hose with a run than to risk losing a good job.

Even if you have to do without other things at first, make sure you own several pair of shoes. Then you won't wear your one pair until they become run-down at the heels.

It isn't necessary to have a huge wardrobe. It is better to buy four or five good things a year rather than 20 or 30 cheap, ill-fitting garments. Some girls think the secret of being well-dressed is to have a closet full of clothes so that they can have a change every day for a month. Usually these are the girls who, in their efforts to be fashion plates, manage only to look cheap.

YOUR VOICE, too, will play an important part in any job you hold. A high-pitched or nasal voice may drive your boss mad. He will also object to the girl who talks in loud tones across a room.

Leave your heady perfumes on the dressing table for evening dates. After a shower in the morning, you can use a light cologne, but don't wear a heavy scent that will permeate the office. And please leave last night's orchid in the ice box.

It is perfectly all right to wear a small corsage in the office if it has been sent to you there to commemorate a special event. If it is large and ostentatious, however, keep it in the box until you are ready to leave the job.

4 Are Named To Study Sick Pay in Schools

District Commissioners who last spring turned thumbs down on sick and emergency leave with pay for District school teachers yesterday appointed a committee to study the measure.

The committee was named at a joint meeting of the school board and the Commissioners.

Appointed were A. R. Pilkerton, District auditor; Walter Fowler, budget officer; Irving Bryan, assistant corporation counsel, and Adelbert W. Heinmiller, business administrator for the schools.

The committee will estimate the cost to the District government and report back to the Commissioners. In rejecting the measure last spring, the Commissioners said that it would be too expensive.

The Board of Education has proposed that teachers be granted 10 days of leave a year cumulative to 60 days and that teachers now in the system be credited with one day of leave for each year of service in the local school system up to 20.

At present teachers must pay the salaries of their substitutes when absent from class.

Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning reported to the board last spring that the probable cost to the District on the basis of $10-a-day substitute pay would be $150,000 a year.

If every teacher now in the system took advantage of the retroactive provision it would cost a maximum of $387,220, Corning said.

Pearl Buck to Give Lecture on India At Jewish Center

Authoress Pearl S. Buck will discuss "People of India" in a lecture tonight at 8:30 p. m. at the Jewish Community Center.

The program will also feature Noble Paulickpulle, Indian dancer, in a recital. Sir Benegal Rama Rau, Indian Ambassador to the United States, has been invited to attend as special guest.

Tonight's program marks the first of six concerts and lectures to be given this fall and winter under the joint sponsorship of the Jewish Community Center and the East-West Association which Miss Buck heads.

650 Million Oil Plan Launched For Middle East

By The Associated Press

A seven-year 650-million-dollar development of the oil-rich Middle East is being planned with the help of American engineers, it was announced last night.

The announcement was made by Ambassador Hussein Ala of Iran.

Five members of a United States group, known as Overseas Consultants, will leave next month to make a survey.

The group will be headed by John R. Lotz, chairman and president of Stone & Webster Engineering Corp. Lotz told newsmen it is hoped to make similar surveys for Iraq, Saudi Arabia and other Middle East countries "which have large oil resources."

Lotz said the State Department has been "fully informed" of the program and is "cooperating."

Ambassador Hussein Ala said the plan will be financed entirely from Iran's oil production, local taxation and probably an international bank loan, without any proposals for direct aid from the United States.

Army Develops Lighter Clothing For Arctic Wear

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Army, "preparing for an eventuality which might find our troops engaged in Arctic operations," has developed experimental, lighter weight clothing, a general said today.

Maj. Gen. William H. Middleswart, chief of the military planning division of the Office of the Quartermaster General, said the new clothing weighs 21 pounds and will protect a man at 55 degrees below zero.

The present standard clothing ensemble weighs 25 pounds and protects a man at minus 40 degrees.

In a talk to the Women's Advertising Club, he said the Army also had developed a catalytic heating pad that will keep a sleeping bag heated for 20 hours. This bag would be used to evacuate wounded soldiers.

Abandoned Oil Well Spouts in Shreveport

Shreveport, La., Oct. 19 (U.P.)—An abandoned oil well in Shreveport's city limits blew out today, spouting a dangerous column of natural gas and brine 110 feet into the air.

C. G. Bagwell, supervising salvage operations, said the gas would explode and start a "big fire" if it touched an open flame.

The well blew out while men were dynamiting at 2500 feet in an attempt to loosen casing for salvaging.

Feast of Tabernacles Service Set Tonight

Services and entertainment in celebration of Sukkot, the Feast of Tabernachles, will be held at Adas Israel Synagogue, 6th and I sts. nw., at 8 p. m. today for members of the armed forces and patients at military and veterans' hospitals.

The Washington Armed Services Committee of the Jewish Welfare Board will be hosts and Chaplain Henry Tavel will officiate.

Lofstrand Hits Hospital Bond Issue

Anders R. Lofstrand, jr., head of the Montgomery County legislative delegation, yesterday announced his opposition to a proposed $1,000,000 bond issue for erection of a 200-bed hospital in Silver Spring, Md.

Lofstrand said he was not opposed to the hospital itself, but felt the costs would run far in excess of the bond issue, and that operation of so small a hospital would prove inefficient.

He said he felt the county should have a centrally located hospital large enough to care for patients from Silver Spring, Bethesda and Rockville, with the taxes to pay for the hospital spread over the entire county.

5.74% Rent Hike Recommended for 71 19th St. Flats

A recommendation for a 5.74 per cent increase on the rents of 71 apartments at 2200 19th st. nw. was made yesterday by District Rent Examiner James G. Tyson.

Present rents range from $32.50 a month for one room and bath to $77.50 for four rooms and bath. Proposed rents are from $34.50 to $80.

An appeal from recommendation for a rent increase of almost 5 per cent on 119 units of the Bolling Green development in the 200 block of Wilmington pl. se. was filed yesterday. The matter will be placed before District Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell for review.

4-Man Committee To Investigate Proposed Contract

A four-man committee headed by Assistant Engineer Commissioner L. E. Cox has been appointed to investigate a Justice Department protest that a proposed District contract had the effect of limiting bids to one firm.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, yesterday directed Lieut. Col. Cox, District Purchasing Officer Roland M. Brennan, Traffic Director George E. Keneipp and Herbert A. Friede, District Communications Superintendent, to investigate the charges and if the bid specifications were improper to rewrite them.

The specifications, prepared by Friede, covered interoffice communications equipment for the Department of Vehicles and Traffic. Friede has previously been under attack for allegedly helping a fire alarm firm obtain contracts for supplying equipment to the city.

Christian Group Convenes Today At Mayflower

The eleventh annual convention of the Christian Business Men's Committee International will open today at the Mayflower Hotel.

The five-day meeting will get under way with registration at 10 a. m. Street meetings have been scheduled for tonight, Thursday and Friday at 9:30 p. m., at Pennsylvania ave. and E st. nw. At noon Friday a similar meeting will be held on F st. between 14th and 15th sts.

Main business session will be at 10 a. m. Saturday. At the banquet at 6:30 p. m. Saturday a film, "Voice of the Deep," distributed by the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, will be shown. Many members of the group will speak in local pulpits Sunday morning. The convention winds up Sunday with a mass meeting at 3 p. m. at the Mayflower.

Dodecagonal Coins Stir Many-Sided Debate

Reference was made in this space some time ago to dodecagonal Canadian nickels.

Irate subscribers hastened to set me straight, and for once I didn't mind being corrected. Children's Hospital benefited.

For example, Bill Holzman of 4303 S. 12th rd., Arlington, Va., sent in a Canadian nickel and accompanied it with a terse:

"This is a Canadian nickel. It is round."

Bernard Snyder of 2 Forrester st. se. also went digging for some round Canadian nickels to prove me wrong, and came up with two, plus a whole fistful of other foreign coins—and Capital Transit tokens. So Children's Hospital became richer still, in both foreign and domestic exchange.

I got so many nickels I began to have visions of a trip to Quebec. And from Yetta Dworkin of 2512 Q st. nw. I finally got an explanation.

Some Canadian nickels are dodecagonal; but most of them are round. During the war, the metal content of the nickel was changed, so the circumference was also altered, to make it easier to distinguish between nickels and pennies.

I wish Uncle Sam had done that, with his iron pennies, so that they wouldn't look so much like dimes.

What better way to rid ourselves of them than to save up a hatful and ship them off to Children's Hospital?

Streetcar tokens and other gifts have also been received from:

Charles E. Tomkies, 405 Webster st. nw. (check); Mrs. George B. Dalrymple, 4210 53d ave., Bladensburg, Md. (war stamps and refund vouchers from Sears and Montgomery Ward); 6-year-old Jerry Cohen, 4536 28th st. nw. (plus cash); 9-year-old Charles Williams and 10-year-old Bobby Collins of 2603 Franklin st. ne. (cash earned selling lemonade).

John Spear, RFD 1, Nokesville, Va.; "Janice of Newark, N. J., a former District Liner"; Mrs. M. H. James, 2648 S. June st., Arlington, Va. (plus cash); Mrs. Sidney G. Ticklon, 4112 N. 4th st., Arlington, Va.; Judy Juhan and Tommy Webster of Brandywine st. nw. (check representing collections in their neighborhood); O. E. Carruth, 510 E. Columbia st., Falls Church, Va.; 10-year-old Judy Perlman of 4826 Davenport st. nw.; Mrs. Robert B. Loughead, 2926 Legation st. nw.; Mary Hemingway, 701 Shepherd st. nw. (cash, too).

And, of course, we musn't forget the management at Fairlington, which gets streetcar tokens out of its laundry machines when tenants run out of dimes.

Neither should we overlook the many groups of youngsters who raise funds for the hospital by giving neighborhood plays. Thirteen-year-old Mary Allison McKinley of 2218 N. Pollard st., Arlington, Va., recently directed such an opus, and wants full credit for her cast:

Alice Couble, 10; Patricia Dingley, 5; Jimmie Bradshaw, 4; Patty Rivello, 6; Marcia McKinley, 6, and sister Judy, 5.

And five "Fun Club" members have emptied their club treasury for the hospital. They're Dale Holtzman, Susan Sklar, Janet Ginberg, Donna Berlin and Joan Meyeroff, all of the 5100 block of 2d st. nw.

Children's Hospital thanks all of you who have joined forces to make this a better and safer community—for your children and mine. And the kids thank you, too.

"Two very affectionate 3-month-old kittens." (Sligo 2992.)

WELCOME BACK, JAY

For many months I've been wondering what became of Poet Jay Aitch, whose jingles used to brighten up our mornings.

I haven't learned the reason for his long silence, but I have found out that he's still alive, and still cracking jokes. He's just sent me a terse note stating:

"Capital Transit's higher fares will certainly put me back on my feet again."

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

F. J. Acosta of 2814 31st st. se. thinks we ought to award a prize of some kind to the classified ad which recently stated:

"Car essential, but not necessary."

SRO

This one was new to me; maybe it'll give you a laugh too.

The history teacher was getting mighty fed up with Johnny's inability to answer her questions. In desperation, she snapped:

"Can you at least tell me whether George Washington was a soldier or a sailor?"

"He must have been a soldier," replied Johnny after deep reflection. "I've seen a picture of how he crossed the Delaware—and a sailor would have known enough to sit down."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—"The Letters of Lincoln Steffens," published by Harcourt, Brace several years ago, contains a letter to the author of an article in the New Masses, the Communist magazine. Steffens wrote him: "My hat came off while I was reading today a story of yours. How you can write! And your stuff—Whenever I hear people talking about 'proletarian art and literature,' I'm going to ask them to shut their minds and look at you. I hope you are very young, though I don't see how you can be. I hope too that you are daring, that you have no respect for the writers of my generation and that you know as well as I do that you can do it. Now I'll put my hat on again" . . . The author was young and daring, but never received the letter because it was addressed to him under his real name, Whittaker Chambers. Mr. Chambers said yesterday "I never received it, because I was underground at the time."

The Liberal Party's rally for President Truman at Madison Square Garden October 28 will be a return-to-the-fold session. Appearing on the platform with Mr. Truman will be Harold Ickes, and A. F. Whitney of the Railroad Brotherhood—both of whom had denounced him . . . The Music Corporation of America as well as Columbia Broadcasting System is involved in the current negotiations with the Tournament of Champions, in a deal which concerns more than the mere radio and television rights. . . . A disgruntled screenwriter said, "Nothing's wrong with Hollywood that can't be solved with five funerals."

Eddy Duchin refused to extend his engagement at the Waldorf's Wedgwood Room beyond December 15. He also refused a $8000 offer to bring his orchestra to Dallas, Tex., for a one-night stand during Christmas week. He told the members of his orchestra that they are free to accept any jobs they want to during the holiday season. "But as for me," said the recently married bandleader who's always worked New Year's Eve, "for once in my life, I want to know what it's like to kiss my wife when a band plays 'Auld Lang Syne' at midnight."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Army Airforce Reserve Plan Lags

By Drew Pearson

President Truman's executive order directing Defense Secretary James Forrestal to expedite the training of reserve contingents was an indirect slap at Army Secretary Kenneth Royall and Air Secretary Stuart Symington.

Symington

While the Navy has kept its reserve training program in good shape, Royall and Symington have lagged behind in planning reserve units for the Army and Air Forces.

The top brass in the Pentagon Building, whose views are echoed by Royall and Symington, frown on reserve training, want a big standing Army costing the taxpayers 20 billion dollars annually.

However, when Royall and Symington presented the brass hats' views at a recent White House meeting, Truman cut them short, pointing out that there are more than 10 million former servicemen in the country, trained in the last war.

"These men, or a large part of them, would have to be called back anyhow, if there is another war," declared Truman, "so, why not draw on this experienced manpower now for reserve training. This idea of establishing a big standing Army is ridiculous, unnecessary and far too costly."

Dixiecrats on the Ball—The Dixiecrats are secretly pouring money into Republican Senator Joe Ball's desperate campaign for re-election in Minnesota. The offer was made over the phone to Ball's office. Among other things it was suggested that the Dixiecrats quietly pay the extra charges to relay Mutual network's "Meet the Press" broadcast next Friday over a Statewide hookup of independent Minnesota radio stations. Ball is appearing on the program.

Reason for the Dixiecrats' support of Ball is that his Democratic opponent is Hubert Humphrey, Mayor of Minneapolis, who led the fight for civil rights at the Democratic Convention in Philadelphia.

Railroad Engineers on Dewey—Railroad engineers are talking about picketing Dewey's train with signs declaring: "Your Engineer, Mr. Dewey, Is Not a Lunatic." The railroad men are really burned up over Dewey's impulsive remark when his train suddenly backed into a rear-platform crowd: "That's the first lunatic I've had for an engineer. He probably should be shot at sunrise."

The Vinson Incident—FDR's old ghost writer, Judge Sam Rosenman, is writing the two speeches which President Truman will deliver in New York next month. One will be an answer to G. O. P. charges about the Vinson affair, in which Truman may crack back at the critics who protested his bypassing Secretary Marshall—and show how he did clear with Marshall. Truman may go further and boast that he will always be proud of having done everything in his power to keep the peace, even if he did kick over protocol.

What Jim Farley Overlooked

Jim Farley, Senator Chan Gurney and other dignitaries recently wined and dined in Spain should interview some of the Spanish people before hurrahing for recognition of Dictator Franco.

Spaniards escaping from Spain these days are willing to talk freely, though anonymously. They tell a grim story of constantly increasing privation, of government terror and wholesale violence by the population.

"It took me 38 months to get an exit visa, going at least twice a month to make inquiries," said a young Spanish civil engineer who reached Buenos Aires as an immigrant. He added: "I wanted to go to Mexico, but last year they told me I'd nave to change my application and make it for Argentina or it wouldn't be considered."

Another arrival on the same ship related: "One early morning last May, six civil guards broke into our house and took away my entire family—my father, sister, three brothers and an aunt.

"They were all jailed in the local military prison and kept on potato peelings and water for five weeks. The women had their clothes confiscated and were given flour sacks to wear. The men were questioned daily and beaten when they couldn't answer satisfactorily.

"What the authorities wanted to know was the whereabouts of a certain Socialist leader of the district. My family knew him by name but nothing more. Finally, they released all but two of my brothers.

"I was traveling in Portugal when all this happened. A friend got word to me and warned that I would be arrested at the frontier if I returned. You see, the Socialist was my friend. He has been hiding in the mountains for three years, but his wife was once seen talking to me on the street.

"It took me almost three months and cost $2000 in bribes to get out of Portugal. My family is now being looked after—all except the two brothers still in prison . . . but I'll probably never see any of them again."

State Department officials frown on large shipments of arms to France for fear the Commies might later take over . . . The Scandinavian countries—Norway, Sweden and Denmark—are secretly negotiating a neutrality pact of their own in order to stay out of the East-West battle.

Speaking of Figures

THE HECHT CO.
IN WASHINGTON

• Speaking of Figures . . . During the twelve-month period ending July 31, 1948, The Hecht Company attained a new peak in dollar-volume . . . and the figures show the largest volume of retail business in the Washington area.

• Speaking of Figures . . . The Hecht Company's new multi-million-dollar department store in Silver Spring, Maryland, has changed the pattern of retail distribution in the Washington area.

• Speaking of Figures . . . The Hecht Company has invested over one million dollars in its main store at F and Seventh Streets in Washington, in a complete remodeling and rebuilding program, from basement to roof.

• Speaking of Figures . . . The Hecht Company has added 125,000 square feet of space to its modern New York Avenue Service Building, making a total of 485,000 square feet, to improve its facilities for you.

• Speaking of Figures . . . The Hecht Company broke all selling records . . . for all time . . . for a single day's business . . . on December 13, 1947 . . . when our patrons purchased more than one-half million dollars worth of merchandise from our Washington and Silver Spring stores.

• Speaking of Figures . . . The lovely young lady at the top of this page feels very much as we do . . . that figures speak for themselves.

The Hecht Co. Washington and Silver Spring Sales Volume, Year Ending July 31, 1948, $46,038,545

FIFTY-TWO years ago, it was just a dream . . . today, it's a reality. More families in Washington buy more merchandise at The Hecht Company than at any other establishment in the Nation's Capital . . . and speaking of figures, that adds up to the greatest total in the history of the District of Columbia. Once upon a time, a classic writer said, "Great oaks from little acorns grow" . . . and we traced the quotation back as far as 1632, which ought to make it authentic. Meantime, we're rather proud of our humble beginning . . . because we started with a little store on Seventh Street near F . . . and while we did not have the magnificent stores we occupy today, we did have the same idea . . . and the same ideal . . . that any retail institution worthy of success must base its growth and development on service . . . public consciousness . . . and honest, efficient performance. Nor can we fail to extend due and proper appreciation to our executives and our thousands of loyal associates . . . as well as to America's great manufacturers and resources who have helped so immeasurably in making this dream come true . . . and whose cooperation throughout the years has made The Hecht Company known throughout the nation as "America's store of nationally famous merchandise." We think the figures speak for themselves . . . and they speak most eloquently . . . because you'll see The Hecht Company label on more merchandise . . . than any other label in the Nation's Capital. To you, our friends and patrons, we are indebted for the confidence and good-will you have given us . . . as we pledge a continuance of the policies upon which this business has been built . . . Service . . . Public Consciousness . . . and Honest, Efficient Performance.
